

learned to read by himself, and mastered the elements of astronomy whilst a shepherd's boy, in the field, by night.

And perhaps it is not too much to say that if the hours wasted in idle company, in vain conversation at the tavern, were only spent in the pursuit of useful knowledge, the dull, est apprentice in any of our shops might become an intelligent member of society, and a fit person for most of our civil offices. By such a course the rough coverings of many a youth is laid aside; and their ideas, instead of being confined to legal subjects and professional technicalities, might range the wide fields of creation; and other stars from among the young men might be added to the list of worthies that are guiding our country with bright yet mellow light.—Rev. Dr. Murry.

"BORN IN THE EAST, OF NO SECT ARE WE."

LECTURES. We are pleased at being able to give notice of a course of lectures to be given by our townsman, Henry Walker. The subject will be, Incidents of Travels in the East. The customs and manners of the Malays, Chinese, and other eastern nations, furnish a vast magazine from which to obtain instruction and amusement, and taking into view the present position of affairs in the eastern world, and the events which have happened there during the last few years, a view of especial interest. Much has been written upon these subjects, but it is always pleasant to hear of them from the lips of an eye-witness, than to read of them. Believing that these lectures will prove of a most attractive character, we cordially wish the lecturer success.

A GENEROUS ACT. We are happy to state that the "Quincy Brass Band" are making arrangements to give a Grand Ball and Concert one evening next week for the benefit of one of our highly esteemed citizens, who has been unable to earn the necessities of life for a long time, owing to ill health. This is truly a noble deed, and our young "Band" deserve great praise, and we hope our citizens, one and all, will help make it a great blessing to the receiver.

We are requested to say, that a Committee will be at the Hall on the day of the Concert to receive such articles of refreshments as may be sent in. Particulars of the entertainment may be learned by reference to their card in another column.

CALIFORNIA GOLD—A LARGE LUMP.—Mr. Henry A. Pierce, formerly of Braintree, has recently returned from California, where he has been a resident for the last four years, bringing with him a lump of pure virgin gold, weighing forty ounces, and worth between seven and eight hundred dollars. It was taken from a ravine, near running water, about a foot and a half below the surface, at the Chasta gold mine, so called, in the North western region of the mining district. Other deposits, amounting to about seventy-five dollars were also taken, at the same diggings, and on the same day. A fair remuneration for a few hours labor. One piece thus discovered was peculiarly marked; as it bore evidence by its fitness, of being originally a part of the larger piece, but which probably had become detached or separated, by the action of water or some other agent. We were favored with an examination of this rich specimen of the precious metal, by Mr. T. Dexter Pierce—a brother—which we must admit surpassed anything of the kind we had ever before seen. Mr. P. returns to his Western home at an early day. He is delighted with the country. Speaks in high terms of the richness of the mines; the fertility of the soil; the beauty and grandeur of the scenery; the mildness and salubrity of the climate, and its health-inspiring qualities.

COLD WEATHER. The weather for a few days past has been unprecedented cold for the season; the thermometer in certain localities in the neighborhood of Boston, ranged from fifteen, twenty, to even thirty degrees below zero; with us, one day this week, at Edward's Hall, it was reported at sixteen below. The prospect for an abundant ice crop is no longer doubtful; it is now being taken from Fresh Pond, over a foot in thickness—clear and solid as the crystal.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES. The following table of the number of pounds to the bushel may be of interest not only to farmers and dealers, but to the public generally:

Of wheat, sixty pounds; of shelled corn, fifty-six pounds; of corn in the cob, seventy pounds; of rye, fifty-six pounds; of oats, thirty pounds; of barley, forty-eight pounds; of potatoes, sixty pounds; of beans, sixty pounds; of bran, twenty pounds; of clover seed, twenty pounds; of timothy seed, forty-five pounds; of flax seed, fifty-eight pounds; of hemp seed, forty-four pounds; of buckwheat, forty-eight pounds; of blue grass seed, fourteen pounds; of castor beans, forty-six pounds; of onions, fifty-seven pounds; of carrots, fifty pounds; of turnips, sixty-four pounds.

Speakership—Synopsis of the President's Message—Harper's Ferry affair—Territorial matters settled in his opinion—The Slave Trade—Chinese Treaty—Foreign relations—Cuba—Mexican affairs—Domestic matters—District of Columbia.

No Speaker is chosen at Washington, and the impracticability of many of the members of the House give but little encouragement, that a choice on the majority principle will soon be chosen. Sherman holds his own, but the opposition to him is very unharmonious.

The Annual Message of the President was sent to Congress on Tuesday. It is very long, and we can give but a brief synopsis. The President after expressing gratitude to the Almighty for blessings throughout the year, alluded, as we expected, to the recent affairs at Harper's Ferry; while he admits that a repetition of these outrages may at last terminate in open war by the North to abolish slavery; he is of opinion, that such lawless acts, afford a solemn warning to us all to beware of the approach of danger. He cordially congratulates Congress on the final settlement by the Supreme Court of the question of slavery in the Territories. The right says he, has been established, of every man to take his property of every kind, including slaves, into the Territories, which belong equally to the whole Confederacy, and to have it protected there under the Federal Constitution. Neither Congress nor the Territorial, nor any human power, has any power to annul or impair this vested right. Thus have the Statutes of a Territory during the intermediate period, from its first settlement until it becomes a State, been irrevocably fixed by the final decree of the Supreme Court of the United States. He then describes the mode of admission as a State into the Union. It may be admitted with or without slavery as their constitution may prescribe. He condemns out and out the Foreign Slave Trade. The Chinese treaty has been ratified. Some questions with the Chinese government relative to the rights of Americans in China and transit duties remain unsettled. Our foreign relations are favorably spoken of. He pays a compliment to General Scott in relation to St. Juan Island affairs. He is in favor of the purchase of Cuba by the United States, and invites the serious attention of Congress to this subject. Mexican affairs look equally favorable. He considers us nominally at war with Mexico; speaking of the outrages upon, and the plunder of American citizens by the Mexicans. He asks for authority from Congress to employ a military force to enter Mexico, for the purpose of indemnity for the future. The inference is clear, that we must have Mexico annexed at all events. The annexation of this beautiful but benighted country to the United States, by purchase or conquest, would be the most important event of the age. California and its results would be nothing to it. Its cession to the United States would seem to be an "irrepressible conflict." Would slavery be extended there is the question. A great part of Mexico by climate is unfitted for slavery. Besides, the Mexicans have an abhorrence for the "peculiar institution," and many of them are nearly as black as the negro. A kind of servitude exists there now, similar to the Code of Negroes. But it is very doubtful if the Mexican people would tolerate African Slavery within their borders. If they come to us, they bring with them their ancient laws and usages. The settlement of Mexico by Americans, would form a new era in the civilized world, and would probably lead to the emigration to its fair fields and beautiful climate of millions from the United States. He recommends the railway to the Pacific for reasons named in his last Annual Message.

Something must be done to increase the Post Office appropriation, as the revenue falls short of the income by a large figure. It is evident from the Report of the Secretary of the Treasury, that as more revenue is wanted, there must be an increase of duties on imports. In conclusion, he recommends to the just liberality of Congress the local enactments of the District of Columbia.

VALUABLE PAMPHLET. Any farmer in this State can obtain a copy of the Agricultural Tract, No. 1, on the culture of grasses, by mail, by sending a request to C. L. Flint, Secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, Boston, enclosing a penny postage stamp.

THE SHALER ADULTERY CASE. This case, which is a branch of the somewhat noted "Canton Poisoning Case," has been tried at the present term of the Criminal Court at Dedham, and resulted in a disagreement of the jury, six being for the Government and six for the fair Defendant. The only testimony of importance was that of two young men who testified that they saw the defendant in bed with one of the hands on the farm, but as they stood at the time some ten rods off and had to look through a not over clean window, the jury had doubts as to their being able to identify the parties with any degree of exactness. District Attorney Harris appeared for the Government, and Robert Gordon for the Defendant.

City Government—The Finances—Horse Railroads all the go—Money Matters—Business prospects—New Legislature—Organization—A screw loose in the Speakership for Mr. Tule—Washington matters—Presidential prospects.

The new city government was organized on Monday. By the Mayor's Address it appears the consolidated debts of the city are $9,670,899.77. The Mayor shows by these figures and by comparing them with the debt of 1849, that the real increase in the city debt in ten years is $1,880,724.86; since which time, bonds paying the ordinary expenditures, more than six millions have been expended for various public improvements and for State taxes. Increase of real estate in 1859, is over eight and a half million of dollars. As an offset to the great debt, the city owns real estate property valued over $12,000,000. This is cheering. The affairs of the city generally are in a prosperous condition. We are soon to have Horse Railroads through nearly all the principal streets of this Metropolis. And as this is the age of Horse Railroads, why not connect Quincy Village with Boston, by this mode of communication. The distance from Field's Corner to Quincy Centre is but four miles; a track could be built for fifty thousand dollars, which if done, we believe would be a greater source to the prosperity of Quincy, than any other enterprise ever before projected, to increase public travel. The investment would be profitable to the stockholders, as the regular Horse Railroads, are generally above par, and yield large dividends.

The money market is hard, but good stocks of all kinds have in price an upward tendency. Among the banks we are told here, that sales of stock have lately been effected at the rate of twenty-four and a half per cent. above par. This is a large margin, and I give it to you as reported in State street. It is safe to predict with this unbounded confidence in stocks, and the gradual rise in real estate, we are to have a healthy reaction in business the ensuing spring.

The Massachusetts Legislature assembled in and was organized at the State House with the usual ceremonies. Dr. Phelps was re-elected President of the Senate, receiving all the votes of his party. Hon. John A. Goodwin of Lowell, was elected Speaker, he receiving one hundred and seventy-nine of the two hundred and thirty votes cast. The Hon. Henry W. Bishop of Lenox, had fifty votes, being the entire opposition strength in the House. The course pursued by Mr. Hale in connection with the Republican party, and I will be a long time before he will again be in full communion with his party. Mr. Hale is an excellent man, with whom there is no lack of talents, and in the ordinary course of things was entitled to a re-election as Speaker. His defeat is a clear evidence of condemnation by the Republican party of his strange course in the commission of the Statutes. Mr. Hale, however, is entitled to his opinion, and is worthy of some praise for his independence in defining his position. The new Speaker is spoken of favorably, and has experience as a legislator. It is presumed the Session will be not over ninety days in duration.

Our Washington news is meagre. With no prospect of an organization of the House, the wheels of legislation are completely blocked. The daily discussion in the House is on slavery. But the American people have become tired of it. It is admitted by Southern writers, correspondents at Washington, that Sherman will ultimately be Speaker. And that Douglas will be an ugly customer in the Charleston Convention of April next. He will probably command a plurality of votes on the first ballot, and the South may finally yield to his nomination, on the ground that any other nominee of that Convention would be whipped by the Republicans. In a personal sense, it matters not whether Judge Douglas is nominated. One thing is certain, that no person can be elected to the next Presidency unless he is an avowed advocate of non-intervention on the slavery question, and of popular sovereignty, in the States and Territories.

OUR SKATING PARK. At the present time, offers but few attractions. The Storm-King in his late frolic played the deuce with it. He laid an embargo upon the sports of the skating fraternity. Their pleasures lie buried beneath a fleecy canopy of several inches. But measures have been taken to have it removed; and in a few days all will again be in motion.

SKATING. Visit the skating ponds and witness the gaily dressed ladies and their gallants gliding over the smooth ice; even a hooker on is well paid for the time spent; but to participate in the sport is the greatest pleasure known to young America. Hear the shouts of fun and pleasure of the skaters as they swiftly glide over the frozen water—all is enjoyment. Those who wish to participate in this delightful exercise should first secure a nice fitting skate; one that is both light and strong. One of the neatest and most durable is the Reversible Skate, patented and for sale by T. W. Brown, 55 Union street, Boston. This skate can be used as roller or straight, one side being flat, the other grooved, and can be altered to different uses for ladies or gentlemen.

Niagara's Ball.

The Ball of the Niagara Engine Company, No. 1, of this town, on Friday evening, Dec. 30th, was a most brilliant affair, and proved, thus far, to be the most successful and pleasant party of the season.

The Hall was very handsomely and tastefully decorated with various emblems, adapted to the occasion, giving to the whole a happy and most gorgeous effect. At an early hour the company began to assemble, and before the ceremonies commenced had reached seventy-three couples, mostly our own people. The severe storm of the preceding day, prevented large delegations, which were expected, from other towns; still, Boston, Dorchester, Canton and other places, were well represented. The music discoursed during the evening was by Gate's celebrated Band, of Boston—whose professional reputation requires no comment from our hands; they were happily successful in the selection and execution of many beautiful pieces, which were heartily responded to by the delighted company. The supper was munificent and bountiful, and done up in the best style, of that prince of caterers, Joseph T. French, who is unrivalled in furnishing and preparing the elegances and choice delicacies of the season, to refresh and regale the inner-man. He was eminently successful on this occasion. The convivialities were kept until a late hour, when the assemblage, dispersed for their respective homes, highly gratified with the evening's entertainment, and with feelings, fixed and firm, that when No. 1. should again have a ball, that they will, at a moment's notice, be

"ALWAYS READY."

COURT DECISION. The Boston Post reports the case of T. C. Horn, et al. vs. John Butman, Jr., et al. and Trustee. This was an action of contract on an account annexed. The plaintiffs are owners of a quarry in Quincy, and the defendants were stone contractors and copartners, doing business in Boston under the firm name of Torrey, Butman & Lyons. This suit was to recover for stone sold and delivered to this firm. It appeared that in January last, that John Butman, Jr., joining with himself the representative of his deceased partner, William Torrey, filed a bill in equity in the Supreme Judicial Court, against the remaining surviving partner, alleging fraud, and praying that an injunction might issue to restrain this partner from his fraudulent acts, and that a receiver might be appointed; that an injunction did issue and that a receiver was appointed in accordance with the prayer of the bill in the month of January last; that in the month of February the plaintiffs, having full knowledge of all the proceedings aforesaid, commenced this action in the Superior Court, and summoned as trustees of the defendants a debtor of the firm. The defendants contended that the plaintiffs, as individual creditors of the firm, with full knowledge of the foregoing facts, could not maintain an action at law, and attach property belonging to the firm, while proceedings were pending in the Supreme Court as a Court of Equity, and while the partnership affairs were under its control in the hands of its officer, the receiver.

The Court ruled that the action at law could be maintained against the defendants, but not against the property, and discharged the trustee; and the items not being disputed, judgment was rendered for the amount claimed. The defendants excepted to this ruling. H. Farnum Smith for plaintiffs; David B. Kimball for defendants and Trustee.

Mr. Henry E. Dwight has been ordained as pastor of the First Congregational Church and Parish in Randolph, Mass.

In Boston, during the year 1859, certificates of intention of marriage, were issued to 2,255 persons. In 1858, the number was 2,118; increase in 1859, 307. This is the first increase for several years.

A tenement house in New York City, was burnt early in the morning on the 3d inst.—It contained seven families. Six persons were burnt to death, all of whom were Jews.

Some one has given the editor of the New Bedford Times a spare-rib of pork, which makes him squeal with gratitude. Don't blame him. Perhaps the benevolent gentleman will "go the whole hog" next time.

The last of October and the first of November, 1859, in Great Britain, are said to have been the coldest and stormiest of any season within the memory of the oldest inhabitant. There was skating in Scotland, a thing unheard of in October for twenty-five years, and colder weather in London than at the same season for forty-five years.

An obituary notice of Col. Benjamin Loring, of Boston, says, that he "leaves an estate of $500,000," and "had only one fault—that he was never married."

A petition has been presented in the Mississippi Legislature from William Webster, a free negro, praying to be elevated into slavery and permitted to become the slave of Dr. Ball, of Charleston, Tallahatche County, (Miss.)

The prisoners in the Indianapolis jail, recently, had a mock trial of one of their members, and upon his being sentenced to death tore up a blanket, and hung him to the balcony of the cells. The turnkey discovered his situation just in time to cut him down and save his life.

The Legislature of Vermont has passed a law against billiards, which provides that the selection of the several towns, in the State shall, whenever in their opinion, the public good requires it, forbid any game or play upon any billiard table in their respective towns.

A girl of eight years has been burned to death, at Centerville, by her clothes taking fire from a stove. When discovered, not a vestige of clothing was left upon her person, nor any indication of life to be seen. Her very flesh was blazing and the whole body was a burnt and blackened mass.

Several years ago, President Buchanan invested four thousand dollars, the interest of which is annually disbursed in the purchase of fuel for "poor and indigent females" in Lancaster, (Pa.)

In the village of South Wilbraham, (Mass.) a spring from which several families were supplied with water, was lately cleaned out, and in the bottom were found a hundred and seventy-five frogs, and half a dozen snakes.

In Mississippi, a law adopted on the 7th ult., provides that free negroes shall leave the State on or before the 1st of July, 1860; or, if they prefer to remain, that they shall be sold into Slavery, with a right of choice of masters, at a price assessed by three disinterested slaveholders, the proceeds to go to the treasury of the county in which the provision of the bill may require to be executed.

It has been stated that the Charleston Democratic Convention meets on the birthday of Buchanan and Douglas. By a singular coincidence, the time fixed for the Republican Convention (June 13th), falls on the birthday of Gen. Scott.

The State of Arkansas has enacted a very stringent measure against free negroes, which went into effect on the 1st of January. All free negroes found in the State at that period are to be sold into Slavery.

In Hanover, (N. Y.) a widow woman murdered her brother by cutting his throat while he was drunk. She gave as a reason that he was dependent upon her and she was tired of supporting him.

The number of railroad accidents in the United States for the last year is stated to have been 79, by which 129 persons were killed and 411 wounded.

THE GREAT RESTORATIVE, FEVER AND AGUE CURED BY DR. M'LANE'S LIVER PILLS. Mr. Jonathan Houghman, of West Union, Park County, Illinois, writes to the proprietors, Fleming Bros. of Pittsburgh, that he had suffered greatly from a severe and protracted attack of Fever and Ague, and was completely restored to health by the use of the Liver Pills alone. These Pills unquestionably possess great tonic properties, and can be taken with decided advantage for many diseases requiring invigorating remedies; but the Liver Pills stand pre-eminent as a means of restoring a disorganized Liver to healthy action; hence the great celebrity they have attained. The numerous formidable diseases arising from a diseased Liver, which so long baffled the skill of the most eminent physicians of the United States, are now rendered easy of cure, thanks to the study and perseverance of the distinguished physician whose name this great medicine bears—a name which will descend to posterity as one deserving of gratitude. This invaluable medicine should always be kept with in reach; and on the appearance of the earliest symptoms of diseased Liver, it can be safely and usefully administered.

Purchasers will be careful to ask for Dr. M'LANE'S celebrated Vermifuge, manufactured by Fleming Bros. of Pittsburgh, Pa. All other Vermifuges in comparison are worthless. Dr. M'LANE'S genuine Vermifuge, also his celebrated Liver Pills, can now be had at all respectable drug stores. None genuine without the signature of Fleming Bros.

The number of steamboat accidents in the United States in 1859, was 21—242 persons being killed and 146 wounded.

The Soft Answer.

BY T. S. ARTHUR.

I'll give him law to his heart's content, the scoundrel! said Mr. Singleton, walking backward and forward, in a state of angry excitement.

Don't call harsh names, Mr. Singleton, said Lawyer Trueman, looking up from the mass of papers before him, and smiling, in a quiet, benevolent way, that was peculiar to him.

Every man should be known by his true name. Williams is a scoundrel, and so he ought to be called, responded the client, with increasing warmth.

Did you ever do a reasonable thing in your life, when you were angry? asked Mr.
Trueman, whose age and respectability gave him the license to speak thus freely to his young friend, for whom he was endeavoring to arrange some business difficulty with a former partner.

I can't say that I ever did, Mr. Trueman.
But now, I have good reason for being angry; and the language I use in reference to Williams is but the expression of a sober and rational conviction, replied Singleton, a little more calmly.

Did you pronounce him a scoundrel before you received his reply to your last letter? asked Mr. Trueman.

No, I did not. But that letter confirmed my previously formed impressions of his character.

But I cannot find in that letter any evidence proving your late partner to be a dishonest man. He will not agree to your proposed mode of settlement, because he does not see it to be the most proper way.

He won't agree to it, because it is an honest and equitable method of settlement, that is all. He wants to overreach me, and is determined to do so if he can, responded Mr. Singleton, still excited.

There you are decidedly wrong, said the lawyer. You have both allowed yourselves to become angry, and are both unreasonable, and, if I must speak plainly, I think you the most unreasonable in the present case. Two angry men can never settle any business properly. You have very unnecessarily increased the difficulties in the way of a speedy settlement, by writing Mr. Williams an angry letter, which he has responded to in a like unhappy temper. Now, if I am to settle this business for you, I must write all letters that pass to Mr. Williams in future.

But how can you properly express my views and feelings?

That I do not wish to do, if your views and feelings are to remain as they now are;
for anything like an adjustment of the difficulties under such circumstances I should consider hopeless, replied Mr. Trueman.

Well, let me answer this letter, and, after that, I promise that you shall have your own way.

No, I shall consent to no such thing. It is the reply to that letter which is to modify the negotiation for a settlement in such a way as to bring success or failure; and I have no idea of allowing you, in the present state of your mind, to write such a one as will most assuredly defeat an amicable arrangement.

Singleton paused for some time, before making a reply. He had been forming in his mind a most cutting and bitter rejoinder to the letter just alluded to, and he was very desirous that Mr. Williams should have the benefit of knowing that he thought him a 'tricky and deliberate scoundrel,' with other opinions of a similar character. He found it, therefore, impossible to make up his mind to let the unimpassioned Mr. Trueman write this most important epistle.

Indeed, I must write this letter, Mr. Truman, he said. There are some things that I want to say to him, that I know you won't write. You don't seem to consider the position in which he has placed me by that letter, nor what is obligatory upon me as a man of honor. I never allow any man to reflect upon me, directly or indirectly, without a prompt response.

There is, in the Bible, said Mr. Trueman, a passage that is peculiarly applicable in the present case. It is this:—"A soft answer turneth away anger; but grievous words stir up anger." I have found this precept, in a life that has numbered more than double your years, to be one that may be safely and honorably adopted, in all cases. You blame Mr. Williams for writing you an angry letter, and are indignant at certain expressions contained therein. Now, is it any more right for you to write an angry letter, with cutting epithets, than it is for him?

But, Mr. Trueman—

I do assure you, my young friend, said the lawyer, interrupting him, "that I am acting in this case for your benefit, and not for my own; and, as your legal adviser, you must submit to my judgment, or I cannot consent to go on.

If I will promise not to use any harsh language, will you not consent to let me write the letter? urged the client.

You and I, in the present state of your mind, could not possibly come at the same conclusion in reference to what is harsh and what is mild, said Mr. Trueman; therefore I cannot consent that you shall write one word of the proposed reply. I must write it.

Well, I suppose, then, I shall have to submit. When will it be ready?

Come this afternoon, and I will give you the draft, which you can copy and sign.

In the afternoon, Mr. Singleton came, and received the letter prepared by Mr. Trueman.
It ran thus, after the date and formal address:

"I regret that my proposition did not meet your approval. The mode of settlement which I suggested was the result of a careful consideration of our mutual interests. Be-kind enough to suggest to Mr. Trueman, my lawyer, any plan which you think will lead to an early and amicable adjustment of our business. You may rely upon my consent to it, if it meets his approbation."

Is it possible, Mr. Trueman, that you expect me to sign such a cringing letter as that? said Mr. Singleton, throwing it down, and walking backward and forward with great irritation of manner.

Well, what is your objection to it; replied
Mr. Trueman, mildly, for he was prepared for just such an exhibition of feeling.

Objection! How can you ask such a question? Am I to go on my knees to him, and beg him to do me justice? No! I'll sacrifice every cent I've got in the world first, the scoundrel!

You wish to have your business settled, do you not? asked Mr. Trueman, looking him steadily in the face.

Of course I do—honourably settled.

Well, let me hear what you mean by an honourable settlement.

Why, I mean—

The young man hesitated a moment, and Mr. Trueman said:

You must settle in such a way that your interest shall be equally considered with that of Mr. Williams.

Yes, certainly. And that—

And that, continued Mr. Trueman, Mr.
Williams, in the settlement, shall consider and treat you as a gentleman.

Certainly I do. But that is more than he has done.

Well, never mind. Let what is past go for as much as it is worth. The principal point of action is in the present.

But I will never send that mean cringing letter, though.

You mistake its whole tenor, I do assure you, Mr. Singleton. You have allowed your angry feelings to blind you. You, certainly, carefully considered, before you adopted it,
the proposed basis of a settlement, did you not?

Of course, I did.

So the letter, which I have prepared for you, states. Now, as an honest and honorable man, you are, I am sure, willing to grant to him the same privilege which you asked for yourself, namely, that of proposing a plan of settlement. Your proposition does not seem to please him; now it is but fair that he should be invited to state how he wishes the settlement to be made. And, in giving such an invitation, a gentleman should use gentlemanly language.

But he doesn't deserve to be treated like a gentleman. In fact he has no claim to the title, said the young man.

If he has none, as you say, you profess to be a gentleman, and all gentlemen should prove by their actions and their words that they are gentlemen.

I can't say that I am convinced by what you say; but, as you seem so bent on having it your own way, why, here, let me copy the thing and sign it, said the young man, suddenly changing his manner.

There, now, he added, passing across the table the brief letter he had copied, I suppose he'll think me a low-spirited fellow, after he gets that. But he's mistaken. After it's all over, I'll take good care to tell him that it didn't contain my sentiments.

Mr. Trueman smiled, as he took the letter, and went on to fold and direct it.

Come to-morrow afternoon, and I think we'll have things in a pretty fair way, he said, looking up with his usual smile, as he finished the direction of the letter.

Good afternoon, Mr. Singleton, he said, as that gentleman entered his office on the succeeding day.

Good afternoon responded the young man.
Well, have you heard from that milk and water letter of yours? I can't call it mine.

Yes, said the old gentleman, here is the answer. Take a seat and I will read it to you.

Well, let's hear it.

DEAR GEORGE:—I have your kind, reasonable, and gentlemanly note of yesterday, in reply to my harsh, unreasonable, and ungentlemanly one of the day before. We have both been playing the fool; but you are ahead of me in becoming sane. I have examined, since I got your note, more carefully the tenor of your proposition for a settlement, and it meets my views precisely.— My foolish anger kept me from seeing it before. Let our mutual friend, Mr. Trueman, arrange the matter, according to the plan mentioned, and I shall most heartily acquiesce. Your &c.

He never wrote that letter in the world!
exclaimed Singleton, starting to his feet.

You know his writing, I presume, said Mr.
Trueman, handing him the letter.

It's Thomas Williams' own hand, as I live, exclaimed Singleton, on glancing at the letter. My old friend, Thomas Williams, the best-natured fellow in the world! he continued, his feelings undergoing a sudden and entire revolution. What a fool I have been!

And what a fool I have been! said Thomas Williams, advancing from an adjoining room, at the same time extending his hand toward Singleton.

God bless you, my old friend! exclaimed Singleton, grasping his hand. Why, what has been the matter with us both?

My young friends, said old Mr. Trueman, one of the kindest-hearted men in the world, rising and advancing toward them, I have known you long, and have always esteemed you both. This pleasing meeting and reconciliation, you perceive, is of my arrangement.
Now let me give you a precept that will both make friends and keep friends. It has been my motto through life; and I don't know that I have an enemy in the world. It is:

"I soft answer turneth away wrath; but grievous words stir up anger."

Cure for Fits.

For a Fit of Passion—Walk out into the open air; you may speak your mind to the winds without hurting any one, or proclaiming yourself a simpleton.

For a Fit of Idleness—Count the ticking of a clock; do this for an hour, and you will be glad to pull off your coat the next and work like a slave.

For a Fit of Extravagance and Folly—Go to the workhouse, or speak with the inmates of a jail and you will be convinced.

Who makes his bed of briars and thorns,
Must contend to lie thereon.

For a Fit of Ambition—Go into the churchyard and read the gravestones; they will teach you the end of ambition. The grave will soon be your bed chamber—the earth your pillow; corruption your father, and the worm your mother and sister.

For a Fit of Despondency—Look on the good things which God has given

Having attained this proficiency, there will be little difficulty in describing any figure formed by a combination of circles or semi-circles. The figure eight is a favorite among clever skaters, and also the figure three, both forward and reversed.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, Jan. 14th, 1860.

"BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE."

OLD COLONY AND FALL RIVER RAILROAD.
We were highly gratified to meet one day last week, at our Station House, Mr. Holmes, the worthy President of this road, and exchange with him the salutations of the season. Mr. H. has been eminently successful since his induction into office. He has brought order out of chaos. The affairs of the Old Colony were never in a more prosperous condition. Its stock is now above par—with an upward tendency. Constant vigilance has accomplished this and promptness and decision of action in all business matters, with a spirit of compliance to the wants of the travelling community, has restored confidence and good feeling, without which, no enterprise can succeed. The President and Directors, have our thanks, for the accommodations afforded to our people; no place for miles around has better. But even here, there is room for improvement. An alteration we think is demanded. And we are not alone in this opinion. There are others who entertain the same idea. Mr. Gay, our esteemed Depot Master, is one of that number. We allude to the removal of the Ticket Office from its present location to its old quarters. Everything points to this place as the most eligible of the two. It is more central; being on the business side of the town, and the main thoroughfare through which all now have to pass before taking the cars. This site is also more favorable for observation, as trains can be seen approaching in either direction, much earlier, than on the opposite side. Another consideration, in case of such a change, it would inconvenience none, while many would be benefited thereby—especially those who have business to transact with the office, or passengers intending to take the outward bound train, who are under the present arrangements, obliged to cross the track to obtain their tickets, and then re-cross them in order to be in a more favorable position to enter the cars; a duty which oftentimes is annoying, and not unfrequently attended with risk. The alteration might easily be made, at a trifling expense; and when done, and the rooms on each wing, suitably warmed and lighted, would be a model Depot, for convenience and comfort, of which any one might be proud.

LECTURES. The lecture by Mr. Walker, at the Town Hall, on Thursday evening, was exceedingly interesting. The subject was his "Travel in the East," and although as yet, but slightly alluded to, the glimpses that he gave us kindles a strong desire to hear the remainder of his lectures. He alluded principally, in the first part, to a voyage by sea and its concomitant joys, pleasures, griefs, and exertions. We hope that the citizens of Quincy will avail themselves of the opportunity to hear the customs, the manners, and the scenery of the Oriental World portrayed by a graphic hand.

QUINCY MUTUAL FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY. We regret to learn that Stephen Bates, Esq., so well and so worthily known as the Secretary of the Mutual Insurance Company of this town, was attacked with severe illness on Monday last. He was quite ill for a few days, but is now we are glad to say recovering fast, but will not probably be able to resume his post for a week or two. At a meeting of the Directors, on Thursday, Mr. Charles A. Howard was chosen Secretary, pro tem. Mr. H. has been a long time in the office and is fully familiar with all its details. Under his Secretaryship, and with the attendance of the President, Mr. Morton, the business of the Company will be conducted as heretofore.

The Quincy office, as appears by the Returns to the Secretary of State, is one of the best Institutions of the Commonwealth.

APPOINTMENTS. The County Commissioners for the County of Norfolk, in conformity with the law passed at the last session of the Legislature, have appointed the following Board of Overseers of the House of Correction at Dedham:

Enos Ford, Chauncey C. Churchill, and Henry O. Hildreth of Dedham.

THE LATE COLD TERM. The first quarter of the month of January, 1860, was the coldest that has been experienced in this vicinity for the last thirty-six years.

Boston Correspondence.

The Calamity at Lawrence—Gloom over the community—The Annual Report of the Old Colony and Fall River Railroad—Interesting items—Proposed extension to Newport—Legislature—Congress.

The awful disaster at Lawrence on Tuesday last, is so appalling, that our whole city is filled with gloom and sorrow. The history of the country does not furnish a parallel to the horrors of this calamity. It is said over six hundred people were buried in the ruins of this immense cotton mill, and between two and three hundred persons are known to be killed. The city papers are full in their details of this terrible catastrophe, involving such large loss of life and the destruction of over $600,000 in property. Unfavorable rumors are abroad in respect to the cause of this heart rending accident, but a thorough inquiry into all circumstances will alone develop the true history of the case, and the public should suspend their opinion until a verdict is rendered accordingly. The all absorbing topic at present, is the Lawrence calamity, and thousands of hearts are sorrowed by the loss of friends and relatives. Nine hundred and sixty operatives were employed in the mill; but probably the whole number in the building was something less than nine hundred. The mill while in the full tide of operation, sunk as from an earthquake in a moment, and buried over six hundred persons in the shapeless ruins, more than half of whom perished. It is a fearful but too true lesson of the uncertainty of life, and teaches us that "In the midst of life we are in death."

The Sixth Annual Report of the Directors of the O. C. and F. R. Railroad Company, is issued. The total receipts are $646,755.52, (for the year ending November 30, 1859). Expenditures $350,673.71. The net earnings in 1859, were $296,081.81. The whole debt is now $195,400.00. Among the assets, property not required for the use of the road are estimated at the sum of $204,240.00. Sinking fund three thousand three hundred and two shares of Old Colony and Fall River Railroad stock for investment at cost $202,596.41, being actually a surplus of the Stockholders. But the most important item in the Report, is the proposed extension of the Road from Fall River, its present terminus, to Newport. It is carefully estimated the cost of the enterprise would be $350,000.00 including docks, wharves, buildings and fixtures. Some of the inducements are the free gift to the Company of the Coveland in Newport, with the right to fill the same and to construct the wharves, docks and other works, so as to meet the best interests of the Railroad Company. To procure a charter recognizing the above grants, so that the Corporation and the travelling public shall be protected to as great extent as possible from all the accidents and dangers, and especially where it may be desirable to run some trains with great speed, at early morning and evening, at all seasons, irrespective of the light of day and fog that obstruct the sight. Three plans for obtaining funds to meet the expense of constructing this extension Road are considered in the Report. The first is to issue stock to the Stockholders in proportion to their interest in the Company, and any stock not taken by the Stockholders, to be issued to persons desiring it. New stock to be on a par with the stock now exists. The second plan is to issue bonds at five per cent. interest per annum, payable in twenty years if they can be cashed at par. The third plan is to pay three per cent. semi-annually to the Stockholders as now, and to build the extension with the credit of the Company, together with the earnings of the Road, over and above the sums appropriated to dividends, absorbing of course the present surplus fund of some $202,000.00; at the end of a few years, the extension stock may be paid for, and would belong to, and divided among the Stockholders in exact proportion to their interest in the same. The whole matter will be laid before the annual meeting of the Company, to be held on the last Thursday of the present month. And as many of the largest Stockholders are in favor of the third plan, or building the extension by their own resources, it is probable it will be adopted. The Report exhibits the affairs of the Company to be in a highly prosperous condition, and gives undoubted evidence that they have been managed with wisdom and fidelity by the worthy President and Directors.

Our State Legislature being thoroughly organized in all its branches, are now busy to work. Governor Banks' Address is highly spoken of, in fact, as being one of his best State Papers, but we have not perused it. The same old story from Washington, no choice of Speaker—daily discussions on the slavery question. All these speeches having reference of course to the Presidential election.

PERSONAL. Mr. J. W. Whiston, the great delineator of men and manners, who has so often delighted the citizens of Quincy with his convivialities, paid his annual visit to our town this week, and received a hearty welcome from two large audiences at the Town Hall. He was accompanied by Prof. Lehman, the Magician, whose scientific illusions pleased every one.

"PUBLIC DOCUMENTS." Our thanks are due the esteemed Representative to Congress from this District, Hon. Charles Francis Adams, for recent favors.

APROLOGIC. The interesting article of our correspondent D. on "Skating," is in type, but is unavoidably laid over until our next.

For the Patriot.

Small Pox.

Mr. Editor:—As this dreaded disease is now in our midst, I hope your readers will be benefited by the following extracts, in regard to its treatment, from Dr. Thrall's valuable work, "The Hydropathic Encyclopedia," a prospectus of which was published in the Patriot last spring.

TREATMENT. As in all fevers, whether eruptive or not, the temperature of the body is the guiding principle in the treatment. To regulate the temperature and equalize the circulation, are the leading indications. On the access of the febrile symptoms, the bowels, unless entirely free, should be moved by tepid injections. When the fever is fully developed, if the heat is not great, tepid or cool ablutions to the whole body will moderate it sufficiently; if the fever is severe, and the heat extreme, the wet-sheet pack should be resorted to, and resumed as often as it becomes warm, until the skin becomes soft, and the temperature near the natural standard. Give the patient as much water as the thirst demands. Give no food save Indian or wheat gruel, and not even that, unless the appetite calls for it. Nursing children may take the breast as usual, if inclined. From the second to the fourth day, when the efforts of the organism are determined to the skin to produce the eruption, be cautious in meddling with the stomach and bowels. Thousands have been killed outright by an emetic or strong purgative administered at this critical period. At this time, all the vital energies are aroused to throw off the virus through the surface, and if, by an irritating emetic or cathartic, this action be repressed, and the force of the disease be directed to the stomach and bowels, death may be the speedy result. The principle here involved affords a satisfactory explanation of the superior safety of the Hydropathic treatment compared with the Allopathic, in all eruptive fevers, as has been frequently demonstrated in practice in the management of scarlet fever.

"After the excessive febrile heat is subdued by ablutions or packings, two cool or tepid ablutions daily, morning and evening, will generally be sufficient through the whole course of the disease. Should the extremities at any time become cold, bottles of hot water should be applied. There is often a strong determination to the brain, evinced by headache, delirium, convulsions, etc., when cold wet cloths should be applied."

"The secondary fever requires precisely the same medication as the primary, though if the former has been well managed, the latter gives but little trouble."

"Ventilation is specially important; the patient should be kept in a large, well-aired room, of even and rather cool temperature."

"NOTE. The symptoms of small-pox, in the above, are stated as they occur in patients whose habits of life pattern after the usual fashions of society. The Hydropathic practitioner will often find them very materially modified in persons who have for a considerable time been accustomed to Hydropathic regimen, especially in children who have been trained on the principle of 'Eating to live,' instead of that of 'Living to eat.' Indeed, in such cases, many of the symptoms laid down in medical books as characteristic may be entirely wanting."

"Under judicious water-treatment, this frightful disease becomes divested of most of its terrors, and there is little danger, except in persons of extremely gross habits and foul blood, of the skin being permanently pitted or scarred."

"As an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," it cannot be out of place to state that physicians are not at all agreed as to the propriety of vaccination, for the reason that there is danger of inoculation with some loathsome disease, as venereal, or scrofula, from the difficulty of getting a supply of vaccine matter from a healthy constitution. Hence, it behooves every one to maintain at all times, the highest possible degree of health, as the best and surest preventive of all diseases, contagious or not. And this is the way: Learn the laws of life—and obey."

OLD COLONY AND FALL RIVER RAILROAD. The accounts of this road, for the last year, foot as follows:

Earnings, $646,755.52; expenses, $341,523.71; net, $305,231.81.

EXTENDED MILK. In the Police Court of Boston, on Saturday last, a case of adulterated or "Extended" milk was examined:

Prescott Bennett of East Lexington, was charged with selling to Abraham G. Wyman, No. 23 Green street, seven quarts of milk, adulterated with thirty-six parts of water. He was found guilty and sentenced to pay a fine of twenty dollars. He appealed and was held in one hundred dollars for trial.

"PUBLIC DOCUMENTS." Our thanks are due the esteemed Representative to Congress from this District, Hon. Charles Francis Adams, for recent favors.

APROLOGIC. The interesting article of our correspondent D. on "Skating," is in type, but is unavoidably laid over until our next.

PERMANSHIP. We would recommend all to attend Mr. Payson's School, for Writing and Book-keeping, which commences at Lyceum Hall, Monday evening. The terms are so low, that none can have an excuse.

Mr. Payson is widely known as one of the most accomplished teachers of Penmanship in the country—and as the Author of "Payson, Danton & Scribner's System of Penmanship," which is the most popular system now published. He has been connected with a Mercantile School, in Boston, for the last ten years, and has prepared hundreds for the Counting Room. We hope the young ladies and gentlemen of Quincy, will not neglect this rare opportunity to get a good Hand Writing and a knowledge of Book Keeping. For terms &c., see advertisement.

PASING AWAY. Colonel Joseph Hall, a former resident of Camden, (Me.) and for some time an officer in the Custom House at Boston, died on the thirty-first ultimo, at the residence of his son-in-law, Charles B. F. Adams, Esq., in that city. He was a gentleman of estimable social qualities, and universally beloved by a large circle of friends for his moral worth and Christian simplicity.

SUICIDE. Mr. Ezra Damon, a resident at Quincy Neck, in this town, committed suicide, on Saturday last, by hanging himself to the bed-post in his chamber. A depression of spirits, arising from ill-health, is supposed to have been the cause.

Let all remember who are troubled with "canker" in sores, that a little lime, used once a week, will effectually prevent it. Just scatter the lime so that it will come in contact with the bricks or soap stone, when you have a fire in your stove.

There is a place in New Hampshire where they never have any old maids. When a girl reaches the age of twenty-nine, and is still on the ladder of expectation, the young fellows club together and draw lots for her. Those who escape pay a bonus to the one who gets her.

The New York Journal of Commerce estimates the value of this year's cotton crop in the United States at two hundred and twenty millions of dollars. The amount exported during the year ending 30th of June last, was valued at one hundred and sixty-one millions.

Three married sisters, residing in different places—one of them a resident of Lynn, (Mass.) have each within the past year presented their husbands with twins.

The weather at San Antonio, Texas, on the 7th Dec. last, was the coldest that had been known there for twelve years; the Justin State Gazette bears that several persons had been frozen to death in that vicinity.

DR. M'LANE'S VERMIFUGE.—Prepared by Fleming Bros. of Pittsburgh. During a practice of more than twenty years, Dr. M'Lane had attended innumerable patients afflicted with every form of worm disease, and was induced to apply all the energies of his mind to the discovery of a vermifuge, or worm destroyer, certain in its effects; the result of his labors is the American Worm Specific, now before the public, prepared by Fleming Bros. of Pittsburgh, which is perfectly safe, and may be given alike to children of the most tender age, or to the aged adult; it purges mildly and induces fever, and destroys worms with invariable success. It is easy of administration, and as it does not contain mercury in any form whatever, no restrictions are necessary with regard to drinking cold water, nor is it capable of doing the least injury to the tenderest infant. An incredible number of worms have been expelled by this great vermifuge.

Purchasers will be careful to ask for Dr. M'Lane's celebrated Vermifuge, manufactured by Fleming Bros. of Pittsburgh, Pa. All other Vermifuges in comparison are worthless. Dr. M'Lane's genuine Vermifuge, also his celebrated Liver Pills, can now be had at all respectable drug stores. None genuine without the signature of Fleming Bros.

Poetry.

Hope On.

Hope on! how oft the darkest night
Precedes the fairest day!
Oh, guard my soul from sorrow's blight—
Clouds may obscure the day god's light,
When they have passed away.

Hope on! though disappointment's wings
Though slander drive her rankling stings,
Though malice all her venom brings,
Still must the storm pass o'er.

If slave to poverty thou art,
Bear bravely with thy lot;
Though keen her galling chains may snarl,
Strive still to rend their links apart,
Hope on! for the despairing heart
God surely loveth not.

Hope on! Hope on! though drear and dark Thy future may appear;
The sailor in his storm-tossed bark,
Still guides the helm and hopes to mark,
Amid the gloom some beacon spark,
His dangerous way to cheer.

Thou' wealth takes wings, or friends forsake,
Be not by grief opprest and sad;
Stern winter winds wish see the lake,
But gentler spirit's hands shall break;
Hope on! a firmer purpose take,
And leave to God the rest.

Keep Cool.

What's the need of so much fretting?
Men or women, do not let Passions o'er your way be getting,
Strive to keep more cool.

Go about your business singing,
Time will then seem lightly winging,
Pleasant meditations bringing;
Learn yourself to rule.

Much of good you should be learning,
Rather than let passions burning
Keep you from again returning
To the pleasant way.

From which you so oft have wandered,
Having seldom at rest pondered
On the precious time thus squandered,
As you went astray.

Let no little crosses move you,
For when fretting who can love you?
Angels kind and God above you Never fret and scold.

Then let cheerfulness forever
Conquer frowns and gloom forever,
Let one act the sweet life over—Binding all the fold.

They who when the way looks dreary
Strive to make it bright and cheery, Aiding all they can the weary,
Are the "salt of earth."

Angels, but for earth's disguising,
Wingless, else they'd be uprising,
Where the angels in the sky
Of the higher host.

If another's ways don't suit you,
Do not get cross and say "You hate you!"
Or, "Be off, else I will boot you!"
This is not the way.

If you think he errs, to right him
You should never feel to fight him,
You should never feel to fight him,
Try love's gentle way.

The Dead.

The dead alone are great!
While heavenly plants above on earth
The soil is one of dewless death;
But when they die, a morning shower
Comes down to make their memories flower
With odors sweet though late.

The dead alone are fair!
While they are with us, strange lives play
Before our eyes and chase away
God's light; but let them pale and die,
And swell the stores of memory;
There is no envy there.

The dead alone are dear!
While they are here long shadows fall
From our own forms, and darken all;
But when they leave us, all the shade
Is round our own and footsteps made,
And they are bright and clear.

Secret Sorrow.

Where'er we see a smiling face,
How little do we know,
Within that honest face a large space
Is filled with pain and woe.

Perhaps a pleasant smile conceals,
A pang which none can see,
And while the brow a joy reveals,
The fire of anguish burns.

O could we read the inmost heart,
Its sorrow and its grief,
Back from the smiling face we'd start,
And seek to give relief.

Pity, instead of hate, would move,
And love possess the breast,
A thousand times we should approve
Where censure is expressed.

Anecdotes.

A lady wished a seat in a crowded hall—
A handsome gentleman brought her a chair.
"You are a jewel," said she. "Oh, no; I am a jeweller; I have just set the jewel."

An infidel, who had been attempting to prove that men have no souls, asked a lady, with an air of triumph, what she thought of his philosophy. "It appears to me," she replied, "that you have been employing a good deal of talent to prove yourself a beast."

"Come here, my little dear," said a young man to a little girl, to whose sister he was paying his addresses; "you are the sweetest thing on earth."

"No, I am not," she replied, artlessly;
"sister say you are the sweetest."

A beggar, asking charity of a gentleman, told him that he was a poor tradesman. "I should rather think," said the gentleman,
"you were a solicitor."

DR. M'LANE'S CELEBRATED VERMIFUGE AND LIVER PILLS.

WE beg leave to call the attention of the Trade, and more especially the Physicians of the country, to two of the most popular remedies now before the public.
We refer to

Dr. Chas. M'Lane's Celebrated Vermifuge and Liver Pills.

We do not recommend them as universal Cure-alls, but simply for what their name purports, viz.:

THE VERMIFUGE,
For expelling Worms from the human system. It has also been administered with the most satisfactory results to various Animals subject to Worms.

THE LIVER PILLS,
For the cure of LIVER COMPLAINTS,
all BILIOUS DERANGEMENTS, SICK HEAD-ACHE, &c. In cases of FEVER and AGUE, preparatory to or after taking Quinine, they almost invariably make a speedy and permanent cure.

As specifics for the above mentioned diseases, they are Unrivaled, and never known to fail when ad-

to be thus abused, to be thus taken from them, and not endeavor to cause such state of things to be rectified. The reason of the aforesaid treatment from the South is very comprehensive. They desire to exclude everything from their midst which will have the least influence to loosen the iron grasp by which they hold their slaves. Better for humanity that you had never been born, than to countenance such an institution as slavery. Not only is it an inhuman system, but a detriment to the progress of mankind. Follow the example Russia has given us in casting off the shackles of those who are in bonds. Do not continue to act with a party who are striving to draw them tighter. Direct your influence to a good purpose. Do not remain silent upon this all-important subject, but use all your powers to induce every one of your countrymen who may be within your reach, to "remember those that are in bonds as bound with them;" and by wise means secure to them their liberty. You then will be living for some use, benefitting the world somewhat for your existence therein.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

"BORN TO DO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE."

FINE TROUT AND PICKEREL FISHING.—Captain Curtis, Sergeant Spear, and Private Rideout, those veteran sportsmen, have recently paid a visit to their friends, the Marshpee Indians, in Barnstable County. They came home richly laden with the fine treasures taken from the lakes and rivulets in that neighborhood. One trout caught, weighed three and a quarter pounds; which, with pickered and other varieties, were enough to fill their hamper, and furnish a feast for a regiment. As usual, we were kindly remembered with a present of some fine ones, which were delicious, and which we enjoyed much. Captain Curtis, Sergeant Spear, and the rank and file, please accept our sincere thanks for this last token of your munificent kindness.

ANOTHER. The second of the course of lectures by Henry Walker, Esq., was delivered on Thursday evening agreeable to the announcement. The lecturer portrayed the manners, customs, etc., of the inhabitants of Ceylon, India, in a chaste and humorous manner—giving a rich and instructive treat to his attentive audience.

THE HIGH SHERIFF AND HIS DEPUTIES. The oath of office has been administered to John W. Thomas, High Sheriff of the County of Norfolk, by C. C. Churchill and Edmund Thomas, Justices of the Quorum for said County, and he has since appointed the following Deputies: Bradford S. Farrington, of Roxbury; Rufus C. Wood, of Canton; John Robie, of Dorchester; A. B. Endicott, of Dedham; V. R. Combs, of Medway; J. B. Ingalls, of Wrentham; John D. Bradlee, of Milton; John T. Jordan, of Randolph; Geo. W. White, Jr., of Weymouth; John Littlefield, of Foxboro'.

THE NEW REVISED STATUTES. The "general statutes of the Commonwealth," as revised and consolidated, consist of one hundred and eighty-two chapters, which will be comprised in a volume of about twelve hundred pages, and the state printer will sell the work at $1.40 per copy. The new code takes effect from and after the 31st day of May next.

IMPROVED. The Lyon Weekly Reporter comes to us enlarged and otherwise improved. The Reporter is a first rate family paper, and we are rejoiced at this evidence of its increasing prosperity, as it is well deserved.

THE QUINCY STATUE. The committee appointed to procure a statue of Hon. Josiah Quincy, Sr., for Harvard College, have held a meeting, Prof. Francis Bowen presiding. It was reported that Mr. Story, the artist, had been authorized to commence the statue, subject, however, to the contingency of obtaining a proper amount of subscription towards defraying the expense.

COURT AT DEDHAM. The case of Ellen Connor vs. Robert Hill, both of Quincy, an action of bastardy, in which the plaintiff sued the defendant for the support of her illegitimate child, of which he was the alleged father, occupied the attention of the Court nearly four entire days. The case was sharply contested, but the Jury returned a verdict of guilty. Damages $900 and costs.

The case of John Green of Dedham vs. Henry Shaw of Weymouth has been finished. Plaintiff, who is the father of defendant's wife, sued for board of same, with children. The trial lasted two days, and resulted in a verdict for plaintiff for $124, about one-fourth of the amount claimed.

SHOULD ACQUAINTANCE BE FORGOTTEN? Our old, and esteemed friend, Chapman, of Photograph and Ambrottype celebrity, has changed his place of business, and may be found for the future, at 257 Washington street, (near Summer,) Boston.

For the Patriot.

Skating.

Quincy, Jan 10th, 1860.

MR. EDITOR: In a recent number of your paper, I noticed an inquiry about the "Skating Club" that was organized the first of the winter, and the proper mode of contributing to the accomplishment of its objects.

That communication makes it evident that the public ought to receive information from some authoritative source with regard to the nature, plans, and present condition of this organization. No apology, then, can be needed for these lines.

The "QUINCY SKATING CLUB," to which reference was made, was formally organized at a meeting held in Mariposa Hall, on Nov. 14th, 1859.

At that meeting a Constitution was adopted and the following gentlemen chosen as officers for the ensuing year:

President: Edward H. Dewson.
Vice-President: Henry Curtis.
Secretary: Samuel A. Duncan.
Treasurer: Edward B. Souther.
Directors: Quincy Tirrell, Benjamin F. Bass, and William Pantan.

Any person may become a member upon the payment of one dollar into the treasury.

Upon these receipts for membership, and such subscriptions as may be received from the public at large, the CLUB rely for the means of carrying their plans into continued and successful operation.

They have already pledged their credit to the landholders whose grounds they occupy, for the sum of one hundred and fifteen dollars, to indemnify them for injury from flowage, and to pay for the use of the land; and the expenses for building dams, erecting seats, clearing off the snow, and flowing the ice, cannot, at the least calculation, fall far below eighty-five dollars more.

Of the two hundred dollars thus needed, but little more than one half has been subscribed: for the remainder, the CLUB must look to the bounty of the public, trusting that the public will not allow it to become inefficient for want of funds.

It is not the intention nor the desire of the CLUB to be exclusive in the enjoyment of the "Pond" which they have constructed: on the contrary, they have from the outset, freely opened it to all who have felt disposed to profit from the cheapest, and most healthful and invigorating amusement that the season affords. It is hoped that those who have availed themselves of the advantages thus offered, will appreciate the generosity of the CLUB, and be willing to assist in defraying the expenses which have been incurred by a few for the general good. Our worthy Treasurer, Mr. Souther, will be ready at all times to receive subscriptions; and remittances may also be made to him through the hands of the other officers.

This announcement will serve to relieve your perplexed correspondent, who seems to have been deterred from rendering "material aid" to our cause, by ignorance of our authorized financial agent.

No one need suppose himself limited to the sum of one dollar in his contribution, which has been fixed upon merely as a nominal price of membership.

All should pay in proportion to the good received; and, if a live, able-bodied person hasn't enough vitality in him to derive more than a dollar's worth of good from a winter's skating, he is surely an object of pity, and ought to go back to the commencement of life and re-fit.

Most certainly this is an enterprise well worthy of the cordial support and hearty cooperation of all our citizens. There is no popular recreation better calculated to amuse and benefit at the same time, than this. The "Ice-field" is an arena where all can meet on an equality; where the busy cares of the hour are thrown aside, and every one abandons himself to the glorious hilarity of the exhilarating sport. Here young men and old, from the gray-haired patriarch, down through vigorous youth to the "wee-toddling" urchin, that ought for efficient action to have his legs spliced to a length exceeding that of his whole body; and women, too—the staid matron, as well as the smiling maiden with her merry exulting laugh—decked in their gay and picturesque costumes; all, mounted on their gliding steel shod runners, of every variety—from the old-fashioned, home-made, pine-wood, pine-penny skate, to the Oxford Rosewood and Ufford's latest metallic invention, that comes and fastens to your foot by simply whistling to it, and then dashes away with you so swift that you cannot stop,—go chasing each other over the glassy plain in mad excitement; darting back and forth, and crossing and re-crossing each other's track, as they weave the intricate mazes of their course, till the cracking ice bears the merriest, happiest throng, that can be found.

The boisterous shouts and ringing peals of laughter that go up into the bright sunshine and clear sparkling air, testify the exuberant joy that thrills the glad hearts below.

But to the reflecting mind, this is the least cheering feature to the scene. The gain to the cause of health and physical development is incalculable. Anything that will call the pale youth and sickly girl from the stifling confinement, and scorched, poisonous air of over-heated apartments, out into the pure life-giving atmosphere, that knows no bounds but the broad heavens, is a blessing; and skating is just the exercise for this.

It rouses the dormant life and listless energies; it expands the lungs, and sends the purple flood tingling and leaping with quickened impulse through the veins; it braces the whole system, and greatly increases the action of the vital forces.

We cannot live too much in the open air. A popular medical writer lays it down as one of our fundamental errors,

"That we breathe too little."

To this, as much as to anything, may be traced the physical degeneracy, that is charged upon the American nation.

But the recent introduction, and increasing popularity, of gymnastics, of skating, boating, cricket, games of ball, and other manly, out-door sports, that attract the denizens of suffocating drawing rooms, and dusty workshops, should be hailed as the dawn of a more auspicious time for nerves, and blood, and muscles.

Let Quincy do her part in the good work, by affording ample encouragement to the "Skating enterprise" that has been inaugurated in our midst.

Modern Society.

A SPIRITUALIST'S VIEW OF IT.

"The world is a stage—

Mankind the actors."

Messrs. Redding & Co., No. 8 State street, Boston, has just published, on a handsome sheet, a highly illustrated view of "Modern Society." The design is credited to Dr. T. John Lewis. From the key which accompanies the work, we are led to infer that the author is what would be termed a Fourier Spiritualist. He maintains that Society, as at present organized throughout the civilized world—is contrary to the established laws of Nature—artificial, unnatural, and demoralizing. He is at war with every element, religious or political, which underlies the frame-work of our present social system. A radical change he thinks must overtake them all, before the benign influence of Spiritualism—the promised millennium—shall rise upon a bright world, and mankind universally bow to its sceptre. He denounces in unmeasured terms all sects and creeds, from the worshippers of the Koran, through their different ramifications, down to the Latter Day Saints. The political world, he says, is equally corrupt—and cannot much longer retain the confidence of the people. The marriage covenant, also, comes in for a share of his censure; he would have the affections left as free and untrammelled after marriage; here he plants himself broadly on the Skidmore platform. Trade and commerce he looks upon as species of gambling—condemned and upheld by pernicious institutions. In fact, to his jaundiced eye, everything looks yellow. Nothing is right. Total depravity reigns every where. He is for razing the whole superstructure to the ground, and remodelling it on an entirely new plan. Under these morbid feelings—a distrust of anything good to be found in his fellow-man, we presume the work first saw the light.

It is a diabolical picture; not very flattering to human progress. On the left, is an unearthly figure intended to represent the arch enemy of the human race, his Satanic Majesty; no one can mistake it; there is the cloven foot, the ponderous tail, which trails in the dust, the wide extended antlers, projecting from either side of the head, which, if not dignified and graceful, have certainly a rakish appearance. It is true, there may be some trifling alterations from the original, which multiplied cares and increasing old age may have occasioned, but on the whole, we think it will be readily recognized—as the same old fellow, who took pleasure in tormenting and frightening our grandmothers—and if there is any truth in the traditions of the Church, of demanding his victims, without a moment's preparation, and springing them away through key-holes, and closed doors,—far, far beyond their native planet, to tenant his dark and gloomy abode.

But the one here introduced by the Doctor, evidently bears marks of a high caste, for he appears to have a taste for the fine arts. In his right hand is placed a bow, and on his left arm rests a huge violin, from which the most discordant sounds are drawn, if we can judge from the effect it has on his audience, (a canine assemblage) scattered about in groups in the foreground. The music—like bad whiskey—has raised the very deed with them; exciting the wildest and most ferocious passions. The scene represented, is a perfect Pandemonium. Literally, "Hell let loose on earth." Or, as the author has it, "Dog eat dog." The Protestant Church has been drawn into the melee; a jealousy having arose about the division of the honors gathered on the bloody fields of Kansas. The Orthodox claim the lion's share. This the Methodist, Baptist, anti-Baptists and Universalist will not accede to. They are not to be trifled with thus. The Calvinistic Synod, have therefore, been held to account, and are receiving a spiritual castigation which we hope will be of benefit to them—teach them wisdom—that when they again attempt to meddle with temporal matters, that they throw off all disguise, drop the cassock, and appear in their true character. Orthodoxy has been as unfortunate in this stampede as she was in her efforts to stop the Sunday Mail. Farther on, may be seen a circle of political disputants. The whole Federal pack have been unknelt, and are attempting to hold at bay a noble old mastiff who is reclining in the sunshine of the Capitol at Washington. There is the Native American—with his brazen trumpet—wavering and undecided; the silver-grey whig, in his dotage, and the "Brown" Republican; the latter, a black, dirty, ill-favored cur, with a real hangman's look, lean, lank and hungry, is sitting on his haunches, gazing wistfully at the rich, fertile fields of the South, and its pleasant homes. But he is ill at ease; he feels that it is a foregone conclusion; for he scents danger in the breeze, which comes rushing on with the madness of a tornado, from the distant shores of Virginia. There are other actors on the stage; murder, incest, robbery and assassination, have their representatives. But such a picture! It must be seen to be appreciated; and those who would follow the vagaries of the delineator still further, should mount the wings of fancy, and thread the mazy labyrinths of Spiritualism,—onward and up—up—to the "Seventh Circle."

WOODS' MEDICINE. Mrs. H. M. Woods, of "Cottage Avenue, Quincy, Mass.," has left at our office, a sample of her "Medicine, or Standard Bitters." "After sixteen years' trial in her own case," the proprietor is induced to offer it to the public, as an excellent preparation to assist digestion. The Universal Cough Remedy in cases of Whooping Cough. There is probably more cases of Whooping Cough continuing to great length of time by the use of remedies containing expectorants, which not only aggravate the Cough, but run down the system, making the Cough fatal, or producing Consumption, than by any other cause. This is completely obviated in the Universal Cough Remedy, which contains nothing to produce nausea or prostration; and the results justify this declaration, and all are asked to satisfy themselves by trial. See advertisement.

New York, August 3, 1852.

I do hereby certify that I have been suffering from a pain in my side and breast for a long time, and after trying many remedies came to the conclusion that my liver was affected. I immediately commenced using Dr. McLane's Celebrated Liver Pills, prepared by Fleming Bros., of Pittsburg, and the few that I have taken have given me relief from all the other medicines I have taken put together. I went to a clairvoyant to consult him; after examining me carefully, he advised me to continue the use of Dr. McLane's Pills; that they would effectually cure me. W. W. PHILLIPS, 2 Columbia place.

Purchasers will be careful to ask for Dr. McLane's celebrated Liver Pills, manufactured by Fleming Bros. of Pittsburg, Pa. All other Vermifuges in comparison are worthless. Dr. McLane's genuine Vermifuge, also his celebrated Liver Pills, can now be had at all respectable drug stores. None genuine without the signature of Fleming Bros.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

A compound remedy, in which we have labored to produce the most effective alterative that can be made. It is a concentrated extract of Sarsaparilla, so combined with other stances of still greater alterative power as to afford an effective antidote for the diseases Sarsaparilla is reputed to cure. It is believed such a remedy is wanted by those who suffer from Strumous complaints, and that one which will accomplish their cure must prove immense service to this large class of our suffering citizens. How completely this compound will do it has been proven by experience on many of the worst cases to be found the following complaints:—
SCROFULA AND SCROFULOUS COMPLAINTS, PIMPLES AND ERUPTIVE DISEASES, ULCERS, FLEAS, BLOTCHES, TUMORS, SALT RHEUM, GOITRE, STYGLANDS AND STYGLANDIC A-BSCESSES, MALARIAL FEVER, DYSPEPSIA, NEU-RALGIA, RHEUMATISM, DEBRILITY, DYSEN-TERY AND INDIGESTION, ERYSIPELAS, ROSE SPOTS, ASTHMA'S FIRE, and indeed the whole of complaints arising from IMPURITY OF BLOOD.

This compound will be found a great producer of health, when taken in the spring, to rid the blood of humors which foster in the system at that season of the year. By the time expulsion of them many rankling disorders nipped in the bud. Multitudes can, by aid of this remedy, spare themselves from endurance of foul eruptions and ulcersous sores, through which the system is started into a course of corruption, if not assisted to do so through the natural channels of the body an alterative medicine. Cleanse out the blood whenever you find its impurities evidencing themselves in pimples, eruptions, sores, or disease of any kind. It is obtained and sloughs in the veins; cleanse it whenever it is foul, and your feelings will tell when. Even where no particular disorder exists, people enjoy better health, and are stronger, for cleansing the blood. Keep the system healthy, and all is well; but with this sum of life disordered, there can be no health. Sooner or later something will go wrong, and the machinery of the system is disordered or overthrown.

Sarsaparilla, and deserves much, the reputation, of accomplishing these ends. But the world has been egregiously deceived by various imitations of it, partly because the drug has not all the virtue that is claimed for it, but more because many preparations, tending to be concentrated extracts of it, contain but little of the virtue of Sarsaparilla, any thing else.

During late years the public have been misled by large bottles, pretending to give a quart of Sarsaparilla for one dollar. Most of these have been frauds upon the sick, for they not only contain little, if any, Sarsaparilla, but often no curative properties whatsoever. Hence, bitter and painful disappointment followed the use of the various extracts of Sarsaparilla which flooded the market, until the name itself is justly despised, and has become synonymous with imposition and cheat. Still call this compound Sarsaparilla, and intend supply such a remedy as shall rescue the sufferer from the land of delusion which rests on it. And we think we have ground for saying it has virtues which are irresistible the ordinary run of the diseases it is intended to cure. In order to secure their complete cure from the system, electrolysis should judiciously taken according to directions on a bottle.

PREPARED BY
DR. J. C. AYER & CO.
LOWELL, MASS.
Price, $1 per Bottle; Six Bottles for $5.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, known for itself such a remedy for the cure of every variety of Throat and Lung Complaint, that it is entirely unnecessary for us to recount the details of its virtues, wherever it has been used.
As it has long been in constant use throughout this section, we need not do more than say the people's quality is kept up to the best ever has been, and that it may be relied on for their relief all it has ever been found to do.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills, FOR THE CURE OF Stomach, Jaundice, Dropsy, Indigestion, constipation, Flat Stomach, Liver, Headache, or Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, or Complaint, Dropsy, Tetters, Tumors and Rheum, Worms, Gout, Neuralgia, as a Pain Killer, and for Purifying the Blood.

They are sugar-coated, so that the most sensible can take them pleasantly, and they are the most perfect in the world for all the purposes of a daily physic.
Price 25 cents per Box; Five boxes for $1.00.
Great numbers of Clergymen, Physicians, Statesmen, and eminent gentlemen, have lent their names to certify the unparalleled usefulness of these medicines, but our space here will not permit the recital of them. The extracts below named forth-rightly give, with also full descriptions of the above complaints, and the treatment that should be followed for their cure.
Do not be put off by unprincipled dealers who sell preparations they make and sell for the name AYER'S, and take no others. The sick man at the best aid there is for them, and they should use it.

All our Remedies are for sale by J. E. HAYDEN, and all Medicine Dealers.

The Mechanic's Home.

One evening in the early part of winter,
the door bell rang with energy, and the servant announced a man who wished to see me. A "man" is one thing with a servant, a "gentleman" another, and a "person" something different from either. The man stood in the hall, but I wondered why he had not been called a gentleman. I was puzzled where to place him myself. His dress was very neat, but plain and rather coarse. His linen, that badge of refinement, was white, in perfect order, and almost elegant. Everything about him seemed substantial; but nothing gave me a clue to his position in life. In all outward seeming he was simply a "man." When he spoke to me, his address was simple, clear, direct, and with a certain air of self-reliance.

Doctor, he said, I wish you to come and see my child. We fear he is threatened with the croup.

I put on my hat and prepared to accompany him; for if the case was as he supposed, there was no time to lose. In this disease a single hour may make a life's difference.

In a moment we were in the street, and walking briskly up one of our broad avenues. The child, he said, had been playing out of doors, had eaten heartily at supper, goes to sleep, and waked up a short time since very hoarse, with a choking cough.—
The case was a pretty clear one, and I hurried my walk still more, and in a few moments we were at the door. We went up—up—to the fourth story. The last flight of steps were carpeted, and a small light at the top lighted us up. An excellent and very durable kind of mat lay at the door.
You will see in time why I give these little particulars.

I entered the open door, and was welcomed by a rather pretty and remarkably tidy woman, who could have been nobody in the world, but the wife of the man who had summoned me.

I am glad you have come so soon, she said, in a soft, pure accent. Little William seems so distressed that he can hardly breathe; and the next moment, as we passed through a narrow passage to where he lay, I heard the unmistakable croupy sound, that justly carries such terror to the parent's heart.

Is it the croup Doctor? asked the father, with a voice of emotion, as I bent over the child—a fine boy, three years of age.

It is certainly the croup and a very violent attack. How long is it since you thought him sick?

Not above an hour, was the calm reply.
It was made calm by a firm self-control. I looked at the mother. She was pale, but did not trust herself to speak.

Then there is probably but little danger, I said; but we have something to do. Have you water here?

The husband went to what seemed a closet, opened two doors, and disclosed a neat pine bathing tub, supplied with Croton.
This was beyond my hopes; but I had no time to wonder. The little fellow was in a high fever, and laboring for every breath.
Taking him from his little crib, where he lay on a nice hair mattress, fit for a prince to sleep on, I took off his clean night-clothes, stood him in the bath-tub, and made his father pour full upon his neck and chest three pails of cold water, while I rubbed him briskly with my hand. He was then wiped dry, and rubbed until his whole body was in a flame.

Then I wrung a large towel out of cold water, and put it around his throat, and then wrapped him up in blankets. The brave little fellow had borne it all without complaint, as if he understood that under his father's eye no harm could come to him.

In fifteen minutes after he was wrapped in the blanket, he was in a profuse perspiration, in a sound slumber and breathing freely. The danger was over—so rapid is this disease and so easily cured.

Happiness had shed a serene light upon the countenance of the father, and thrown over the mother's face a glow of beauty.

I looked upon them, and was more than ever puzzled where to place them. There were no marks of high or superior breeding, not the shadow of decayed gentility about them. It was rather the reverse, as if they were working from a low rank of life up to a higher.

I looked around the room. It was the bed room. Everything in it was perfectly orderly. The bed, like the crib, was excellent, but not expensive. The white cotterpane did not cost over ten shillings, yet how beautiful it looked! The white window-curtains were shilling muslin, but their folds hung as richly as if they were damask—and how very appropriate they seemed! The bath, with its snug folding doors, I knew had not cost, plumber's bill and all, more than ten dollars. The toilet table, of an elegant form, and completely covered, I had no doubt was white pine, and cost half a dollar.

The pictures on the wall were beautifully tinted lithographs, better, far better than oil paintings I have seen in the houses of millionaires; yet they can be bought at Goupils, or Williams & Stevens, for from three to five shillings, and a dollar a-piece had framed them. The floor had a carpet, that seemed to match everything with its small, neat
jewel of a room, in as perfect keeping with all its parts as if an artist had designed it.

Leaving the boy to his untroubled sleep, and giving directions for his bath on waking, we went into the other room, which was differently, but just as neatly arranged, it might have answered for a parlor, only that it had a cooking stove; or an artist's studio, or a dining-room. It was hung with pictures; heads, historical pieces, and landscapes; and such as a man of taste could select and buy cheap, but which, like good books are invaluable. And, speaking of books, there was a hanging library on one side of the chimney, which a single glance assured me, contained the very choicest treasures of the English tongue.

The man went to a bureau, opened a drawer, and took out some money. What is your fee, Doctor? he asked, holding the bills so as to select one to pay me.

Now I had made up my mind, before I had got half way up the stairs, that I would have to wait for my pay, perhaps never get it; but all this had changed. I could not, as I often did, inquire into the circumstances of the man, and graduate my price accordingly.
There he stood, ready to pay me, with money enough; yet it was evident that he was a hard-working man, and far from being wealthy.
I had nothing left but to name the lowest fee.

One dollar does not seem enough, said he,
You have been at more trouble than merely to write a prescription.

Do you work for your living? I asked, hoping to solve the mystery.

He smiled, and held out his hand, which showed the unquestionable marks of honest toil.

You are a mechanic? I said; willing to know more of him.

Take that, said he, placing a two dollar
note in my hand, with a not-to-be-refused air, and I will gratify your curiosity; for there is no use pretending that you are not a little curious.

There was a hearty, respectful freedom about this that was irresistible. I put the note in my pocket, and the man, going to a door, opened it into a closet of moderate size, and displayed the bench and tools of a shoemaker.

You must be an extraordinary workman, said I, looking around the room, which seemed almost luxurious; but when I looked at each item, I found it cost very little.

No, nothing extra. I barely manage to earn little over a dollar day. Mary helps some. With the house-work to do, and our boy to look after, she earns enough to make our wages average eight dollars a week.

We began with nothing, we live as you see All this comfort, this respectability, this almost luxury, for eight dollars a week! I expressed my surprise.

I should be very sorry if we spent so much said he. We have not only managed to live on that, but we have something laid up in the savings bank.

Will you have the goodness, just explain to me how you do it? for I was really anxious to know how a shoemaker and his wife, earning but eight dollars a week, could live in comfort and elegance, and yet lay up money.

With pleasure, he replied, for you may persuade others, no better off than I am, to make the best of their situation.

I took a chair which he handed me. We were seated, and his wife, after going to listen to the soft and measured breathing of little Willie, sat down to her sewing.

My name, he said, is William Carter. My father died when I was young, and I was bound out apprentice to a shoemaker, with the usual provision of schooling. I did as well as boys do generally at school, and, as I was very fond of reading, I made the most of my spare time, and the advantages of the Apprentices Library. Probably the books that helped me most were the sensible writings of William Cobbett. Following his example, I determined to give myself a useful education, and have to some extent succeeded. But a man's education is a life-long process; and the more I learn, the more I see before me.

I was hardly out of my time when I fell in love with my Mary, there, whom some people think very pretty, but whom I know to be very good.

Mary looked up with such a bright loving smile as to fully justify "some people" in their notion.

When I had been one year a journeyman, and had laid up a few dollars, (for I had a strong motive to be saving,) we were married.
I boarded at her father's, and she bound shoes for the shop where I worked. We lived a few weeks at her home; but it was not our home—the home we wanted; so we determined to set up house-keeping. It was rather a small set-up, but we made it answer.
I spent a week in house-hunting. Some were too dear, some too shabby. At last I found this place. It was new and clean, high and airy, and I thought it would do.
I got it for fifty dollars a year; and though the rents all around have advanced, our landlord is satisfied with that, or takes it in preference to risking a worse tenant. The place was naked enough, and we had little to put in it save ourselves; but we went cheerfully to work, earned all we could—and you see the result.

I see; but I confess I do not understand it, said I, willing to hear him explain the economics of this modest and beautiful home.

Well, it is simple enough. When Mary and I moved ourselves here, and took possession, with a table, two chairs, and cot-bed, with a straw mattress, the first thing we did,
was to hold a council of war. Now, Mary, my love, said I, here we are. We have next to nothing, and we have everything to get, and nobody but ourselves to help ourselves.

We found that we could earn on an average, eight dollars a week. We determined to live as cheaply as possible, save all we could, and make ourselves a home. Our rent was a dollar week—our fuel, light, water-rent, and some little matters, a dollar more. We have allowed the same amount for our clothing, and by buying the best things, and keeping them carefully, we dress well enough for that. Even my wife is satisfied with her wardrobe, and finds that raw silk at six shillings a yard is cheaper in the long-run, than calico at one shilling. That makes three dollars a week, and we had still our living to pay for. That costs us, with three in our family, just one dollar a week more.

One dollar a piece?

No—one dollar for all. You seem surprised, but we have reckoned it over and over. It costs more at first, but now we have learned to live both better and cheaper.
So that we have a clear surplus of four dollars a week, after paying all expenses of rent, fire, light, water, clothing and food.
I do not count luxuries, such as an evening at the theatre, a concert, or a treat to our friends when we give a party.

I know a smile came over my face, for he continued:

Yes, give a party; and we have some pleasant ones, I assure you. Sometimes we have a dozen guests, which is quite enough for comfort, and our treat of chocolate, cakes, blanc mange, etc., costs as much as two dollars; but this is not very often. Out of a surplus, which comes, you see, to two hundred dollars a year, we have bought all you see, and have money in the bank.

I see it all, said I; all but the living.
Many a mechanic spends more than that for cigars, to say nothing of liquor. Pray, tell me precisely how you live?

With pleasure. First of all, then, I smoke no cigars, and chew no tobacco, and Mary takes no snuff.

Here the pleasant smile came in, but there was no interruption, for Mary seemed to think her husband knew what he was about, and could talk very well without her aid.

I have not drank a glass of liquor since the day I was married, except a glass of wine about four times a year, on Christmas,
New Year's, Fourth of July, and Willie's birthday. The last is our especial holiday.

I had read enough of physiology to make up my mind that tea and coffee contain no nutriment, and are poisonous besides; and I tried a vegetable diet long enough to like it better than a mixed one, and to find that it agreed with me better; and as we have read and experimented together, of course, Mary thinks as I do.

But what do you eat and drink? I asked, curious to see how far this self-taught philosopher had progressed in the laws of health.

Come this way and I will show you, he said, taking a light and leading the way into a capacious store-room. Here, first of all, is a mill that cost me twelve shillings. It grinds all my grain, gives me the freshest and most beautiful meal, and saves tolls and profits. This is a barrel of wheat. I buy the best, and am sure that it is clean and good. It costs less than three cents a pound; and a pound of wheat a day, you know, is food enough for any man. We make it into bread, mush, pies and cakes.
Here is a barrel of potatoes. This is homi-ony. Here are some beans, a box of rice, macaroni, and here is a barrel of apples, the best that I can find in Fulton Market. Here is a box of sugar, and this is our butter jar. We take a quart of country milk a day; I buy the rest of our living by the box or barrel, where I can get it best and cheapest. Making wheat—eaten as much of bread, and all made without boiling—and potatoes, or hominy, or rice, the staple, you can easily see that a dollar a week for provisions is not only ample, but allows of a healthy and almost luxurious variety. For the rest, we eat greens, vegetables, fruit and berries in their season. In the summer, we have strawberries and peaches, as soon as they are ripe and good. Mary will get up a dinner from these materials, at the cost of a shilling, better than the whole bill of fare at the Astor House.

I was satisfied. Here was comfort, intelligence, taste, and a modest luxury, all enjoyed by a humble mechanic who knew how to live, at the cost I have mentioned.
How much useless complaining might be saved—how much genuine happiness enjoyed—how much of evil and suffering might be prevented, if all the working men in New York were as wise as William Carter.

I never shook a man or woman by the hand with more hearty respect than when I said "Good night" to this happy couple, who, in this expensive city, are living in luxury and growing rich on eight dollars a week, and making the bench of the shoemaker a chair of practical philosophy.

The Brave Little Yankee.

It happened, in 1775, that the garden of a widow, which lay between the American and British camps, in the neighborhood of New York, was frequently robbed at night. Her son, a mere boy, and small for his age, having obtained his mother's permission to find out and secure the thief, in case he should return, concealed himself with a gun among the weeds.

A strapping Highlander, belonging to the British grenadiers, came, and having filled a large bag, threw it over his shoulder; the boy then left his covert, went softly behind him, cocked his gun, and called out to the fellow:—

"You are my prisoner; if you attempt to put your bag down, I will shoot you dead;
go forward in that road."

The boy kept close behind him, threatening, and was constantly prepared to execute his threats. Thus the boy drove him into the American camp, where he was secured.
When the grenadier was at liberty to throw down his bag, and saw who had made him prisoner, he was extremely mortified, and exclaimed:—

"A British grenadier made prisoner by such a brat—as by such a brat!"

The American officers were highly entertained with the adventure, made a collection for the boy, and gave him several pounds.
He returned, fully satisfied for the losses his mother sustained. The soldier had side arms, but they were of no use, as he could not get rid of his bag.

Old Fashioned Comforts.

Our ancestors were a frugal, self-denying people, inured to hardships from the cradle;
they were content to be without almost all the luxuries of life, but they enjoyed some of its comforts to which many of us are strangers,—old-fashioned comforts, we may term them,—and among these the old fire-place, as it used to be termed, held no mean rank.

How vividly the picture of one of those spacious kitchens of the olden time comes to our mind with its plain furniture, and sanded floor innocent of paint, but as white as the nearest of housewives could make it. In one corner stood the old clock, its very face wearing an aspect of good cheer, and seeming to smile benignantly upon a miniature moon over its head, which tradition said, had at a remote period followed the rising and sitting of its great prototype in the heavens, though its days of active service were long ago over.

But the crowning glory of that kitchen was not its white sanded floor, nor the high desk with its pigeon holes, and secret drawers which no venturous youngster ever dared invade, nor yet, the old clock ticking so musically in one corner, but it was the old-fashioned fire-place with its blazing embers, huge back-log and iron fire-dogs, that shed the glory over the whole room, gilded the plain and homely furniture with its bright light and rendered the place a fit type of true New England homes in "ye olden times."

Never were there such apples as those which swung round and round upon strings before the bright fire of an winter's evening, —never such baked potatoes as those buried deep in the ashes upon the hearth,—never such corn stalks as those which caught a golden hue from the blazing emblems, or turkeys like those turned slowly upon a spit, filling the room with savory odors so suggestive of a dainty repast.

Before the fire was the wooden settle, and here the children were wont to sit in the long evenings, telling stories, cracking nuts, conning their lessons for the morrow, or listening in silence to the words of wisdom that fell from the lips of their superiors; and anon gazing in silence into the bright fire and conjoining up all sorts of grotesque and fanciful images from among the burning coals.—

No fabled genii with their lamps of enchantment, could build such gorgeous palaces, or create such gems as the child could discern amid the blazing embers of the old fashioned fire-place.

And we must not neglect the chimney corner, where sat our grandfather in his accustomed seat—his hair silvered with the snows of many winters,—a venerable man, to whom old age had come "frosty but kindly," and whose last days were like those of an Indian Summer, serene and beautiful, even till the stars appeared in heaven.

How pure was the air of the room in these days! The huge fire-place, with its brisk draught, carried off the impurities of the atmosphere and left the air pure, life-giving and healthful. Now we crouch around hot cooking stoves and think it strange that we feel so stupid and drowsy on an evening; or we huddle about air-tight stoves and wonder that the air seems burnt and impure; or we sit down in chilly rooms heated by a furnace, and marvel that with all our costly furniture, soft carpets, bright mirrors and damask curtains, they are such cheerless places, so little like our ideas of a New England home.

Alas! that with all the so-called improvements of our advanced civilization, the fire should be permitted to go out forever in our old fashioned fire-places, thus burying in the ashes of the past so many means of health, home-comfort, good cheer and happiness.—

Skating in the Twelfth Century.

One of the old historians of London, writing in the twelfth century, says "that a city should not only be commodious and serious, but merry and sportful." Then follows a description of the different kinds of sports indulged in by the citizens of the city, showing that our great ancestors could throw off the pressing yoke of business and cares of public life, and be jolly, recognizing the utility of a little play to ease life of some of its burdens.

At this period,

evaporation which is caused by the leaves of plants. These two circumstances unite in producing, when no outward agencies interfere, a great accumulation of heat. The warm spell that follows is the true Indian Summer, and may last from five to eight days. During these spells of fine weather crickets sometimes may be heard chirping merrily as late as the eighteenth of November.—Wilson Flogg.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, Jan. 28th, 1860.

"BORN IN MASSACHUSETTS, OF NOBILITATE W.E."

Senator Blake of Braintree.

We select from the Hingham Journal, the following truthful notice of the respected Senator from this District.

Col. Joseph H. D. Blake, Senator from the East Norfolk District, is a resident of the town of Braintree, where he has lived some five years. He was born in Westboro', Worcester County, in 1825, and is consequently thirty-five years of age. He was favored with no more than a common school education; and having nothing but his own efforts to rely upon, he at an early age left school to make his way in the world, and ultimately became a merchant, which is his present calling. Of his political course we know but little, until the Republican movement was first made in Worcester, where he resided, and he then came out one of its strong advocates, often lifting up his voice to convince and win others to the embrace of his opinions. During the campaign previous to the late presidential election, the Colonel was an able and ardent advocate for Fremont. He did his party good service, nor did he relax his exertions when his candidate was defeated, but continued to labor in the cause, and gave a good account of himself previous to the election of Gov. Banks, who, on taking the chair of state, appointed Mr. Blake a member of his staff, in which position he proved himself most acceptable to the Governor, as a noble-looking and efficient officer, and by his uniformly courteous and affable bearing, and generous hospitality, won for himself a host of friends. This post, on his election to the Senate, with characteristic delicacy and good sense, he resigned.

It is hardly necessary to say that Col. Blake is a thorough American Republican. Yet, although a firm and conscientious believer in the political tenets of his party, and ready at all times to defend them, he is straightforward and manly in his controversies, and never permits himself to forget what is due to an opponent.

In personal appearance, Col. Blake is very prepossessing. He is six feet and one inch in height and of proportions almost herculean. In height and form, he resembles Sam. Houston, more than any other man we know of, and although he has doffed the scarlet coat and sheathed the sword, he presents the same bold front in the Senate chamber that he did on the field, and is by far the most majestic looking Senator in the Chamber.—Possessed of an ardent and enthusiastic temperament, united with a flowing speech and ready wit, he is invaluable in a political campaign to those in whose behalf his services are enlisted. If there is work to be done, he is the man for it, and whatever honors he has received, or may receive, at the hands of his party, no one will deny that he has fairly won them.

Col. Blake is a public-spirited man, and has those qualities of head and heart which secure personal popularity to their possessor. At the late election, his vote in the towns of Weymouth and Braintree alone, led that of Gov. Banks by more than two hundred—affording evidence of the esteem with which he is held where best acquainted. He was one of the Parish Committee of the Society to which Dr. Storrs ministers, to arrange for the dedication of the new church, and was the principal mover in carrying out the plans of the day with much satisfaction to all concerned—ever proving himself a ready and faithful worker in the cause of religious culture, and in the promotion of the moral and benevolent virtues.

The Colonel is possessed of a clear, honey voice, and having a musical taste, he has become an amateur singer of some note, and while he is a member of the Legislature, it need not invite the Peake family to do its singing.

Mr. President Phelps has shown his good judgment in appointing Mr. Blake Chairman of the Joint Standing Committee on the Militia, a post which he will fill with honor to himself and benefit to the State. The Col. is highly esteemed as a citizen, and will doubtless show himself a Senator, calm and manly, yet strong in debate, punctual in the discharge of the duties imposed upon him, and worthy of a re-election to the same, or any other office of honor and trust in the gift of his party.

Boston Correspondence.

Matters at Washington.—The Speakership—Difficulties in the way—Hon. C. F. Adams—Presidential election.—Judge Douglas—Sovereignty of his views.

Our latest advices from Washington continue unsatisfactory. There is still no organization of the House, with no good prospects in future. The consequences are disastrous to the financial operations of the General Government, and leave the President and the Cabinet in an embarrassing condition. But the end has not come yet. There is evidently a bad feeling at Washington in its political circles, and a sudden outbreak of passion among the members of Congress might lead at once to quarrel and bloodshed. There is no disguising the fact, that many of them go armed to the teeth ready for any emergency. An effort is making for the House to adopt the plurality rule in the election of Speaker, but it hardly seems probable it will prevail. The probabilities would be in favor of Sherman, but they are not certain. It has been suggested to take an outside man, not a member of the House as Speaker, and that it would be constitutional to do so. The Hon. Edward Everett has been named for the office. While the legality of such an extraordinary course would be doubtful, it is not probable that Mr. Everett would have his name used in connection with that most responsible and arduous office. The friends of Mr. Sherman do not feel disposed to change their programme on him, whose chance is now almost hopeless for the Speakership. Mr. Seward, who was recently at a dinner party given to him, Mr. Sumner and others, by the Hon. C. F. Adams, disavowed using his influence for any other person for Speaker than Mr. Sherman. Mr. Adams brings with him so high a national reputation to Congress, and a character as pure as any other public man living; that should Mr. Sherman be dropped and Mr. Adams substituted in his stead he would doubtless be elected Speaker. It is no objection to him, that this Session is his first entrance to Congress. Mr. Clay was called to this post the first day he became a member, and we believe there are other precedents. Besides, Mr. Adams is well skilled in parliamentary matters, and as a presiding officer would be at home in the Speaker's Chair.

The Presidential question is becoming more interesting as the time draws near for National nominations. Douglas' stock is rising daily. It is now conceded that in the Charleston Convention, nearly all the delegates of our great West, will go for him. His nomination is equivalent to an election. Notwithstanding all that has been said against him by the extremists of both parties, he stands firm on that political platform, that the people, independent of demagogues, believe to be sound and truly Democratic. Equal rights in their sovereign capacities among all the States, and the prerogative of the Territories to make all needful laws in municipal matters, including that great and eternal theme of the Nation, "Domestic Slavery." The right of each State and Territory to choose for freedom or negro servitude, as it shall elect. This great principle is in harmony with our organic form of government, and until lately practised by it from the period of the Federal organization in 1787.

Our State Legislature meets every afternoon, thereby giving the Committees a chance to labor in the forenoon. Many of them will soon report, which will give employment for the Honorable members, all day. Hon. John E. Fry, Senator from the Eastern Worcester District, has resigned his seat. This is the gentleman who seems to be in serious trouble by reason of some financial matters.

Boston Correspondence.

Brilliant prospects of Judge Douglas for the Presidency.—Western Views—His Speech in the Senate on Monday—State Legislature—Local items—Low State of Business—Banks. Money Matters.

The Cincinnati Enquirer of the past week holds the following language: "There are seven North-western States—Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Minnesota, Michigan, Missouri, and Iowa—which will have sixty-six votes in the Charleston Convention, and will be represented by one hundred and thirty-two delegates. The first four have appointed their delegates, and instructed them to vote as a unit for Douglas. The other three States will certainly do likewise. We say to our Eastern and Southern friends as a most important political fact, that the seven North-western States will all instruct for Douglas and give sixty-six votes for him on every ballot. No other man will begin to go into the Convention with the united delegations and instructions of seven States. It is in these seven States where the battles of 1860 will be either lost or won. In addition to these sixty-six votes from the North-west, Mr. Douglas is certain of thirty-five from New York, seven from New Jersey, and forty-one from New England and four from California. He will have one hundred and fifty-seven, certain, which is half the Convention, on the first ballot. At an early stage he will get twenty-seven votes of Pennsylvania, three from Maryland, nine from Missouri, four from Arkansas, four from Texas, and probably twelve from Tennessee, which constitute considerably more than two-thirds of the whole number required to nominate. It is highly probable, too, that North Carolina and Georgia will go the same way. No future event is more certain than Mr. Douglas' nomination."

These views are consonant with those we have expressed in the columns of the Quincy Patriot for eighteen months past. We have labored to the best of our humble ability, and shall continue to labor for the nomination of Judge Douglas for the Presidency. His platform of principles, on the only great issue at stake in the coming national election, is incontrovertibly sound and Democratic—Mr. Douglas is not now in his doctrines of popular sovereignty. It is simple a re-affirmation of them, as inculcated in the Federal Constitution, and as practised from Washington to Buchanan. The rights of States and Territories are sacred to themselves in municipal matters. The right to choose by them freedom or slavery is guaranteed in the organic form of government. It is a question that does not belong to Congress; it is one of those powers not delegated by the Constitution to the national Legislature, and the question of domestic slavery, belongs to the people of the several States and Territories to settle as a State or territorial matter, in their own way.

Mr. Douglas made an eloquent speech in the Senate on Monday, taking the ground that it is the duty of Congress to require the several States to protect each other against foreign or domestic invasion. He was replied to by Mr. Fessenden, who tried to give Mr. Douglas "fit" on his presidential prospects, but the "little giant" sustained his position with his usual ability.

In the Massachusetts Senate, on Saturday, an order was adopted instructing the Committee on Banks and Banking to consider the expediency of abolishing all laws regulating the rate of interest in this Commonwealth. Other matters, mostly of a local character, are before the Legislature not of any public interest. The session will doubtless be short.

The winter is passing off pleasantly, so far as the weather is concerned. Amusements and lectures are all the go here, and our streets wear a lively appearance. But let me assure you, business generally is in a state of collapse. The general prostration of the Western markets and the ruinous fall of real estate there, have had a depressing effect on Boston trade.

The Banks here are losing specie daily. Nearly half of them are below the fifteen per cent. requirement. Let the specie draft continue much longer and we shall have a panic in the money market equalled only by that of 1857.

Scriptural Defence of Slavery

The Republican party, as well as the clergy generally, are proclaiming out against the wickedness of the Democratic party, whose doctrines they say are against the laws of Nature, and the laws of God. This we deny. First: What does the law of Nature proclaim but gradation? which is stamped upon every thing animate as well as inanimate; it indeed, there be any thing inanimate. A scale, from the lowest degree of inferiority to the highest degree of superiority runs through all animal life. We see it in the insect tribes; we see it in the fishes of the sea, the fowls of the air, in the beasts of the earth, and we see it in the various races of men. We see the same principle pervading the heavenly bodies above us. One star differs from another in magnitude and lustre; the greater and superior uniformly influences and controls the lesser and inferior within its sphere. If there is one fixed principle or law of Nature, it is this. In the races of men, we find like differences in capacity and development. The negro is inferior to the white man; Nature has made him so; observation and history from the remotest times, establish the fact; and all attempts to make the inferior equal to the superior, is but an effort to reverse the decrees of the Creator; who has made all things as we find them; according to the counsels of His own will. The Ethiopian can no more change his nature or his skin, than the leopard his spots. Do what you will, a negro is a negro, and he will remain a negro still. In the social and political system of the South, the negro is assigned to that subordinate position for which he is fitted by the laws of Nature.

Then as to the law of God—that law we read not only in His works about us, around us, and over us, but in that inspired Book, wherein he has revealed his will to man. When we differ as to the voice of Nature, or the language of God, as spoken in Nature's works, we go to that great Book, the Book of Books which is the fountain of all truth. To that Book we now appeal; God, in the days of old, made a covenant with the human family, for the redemption of fallen man; that covenant is the corner stone of the whole Christian system. Abram, afterwards Abraham, was the man with whom that covenant was made. He was the great first head of an organized visible Church here below. He believed God, and it was accounted to him for righteousness. He was in deed and truth, the father of the faithful. Abraham was a slaveholder. Nay, more, he was required to have the sign of the covenant administered to the slaves of his household; as will be seen in Genesis, xvii.—13; God said to Abraham:

13 "He that is born in thy house, and he that is bought with thy money, must need be circumcised; and my covenant shall be in your flesh for an everlasting covenant."

Abraham was not only a slaveholder, but a slave dealer, it seems, for he bought men with his money, and yet it was with him the covenant was made by which the world was to be redeemed from the dominion of sin. And it was into his bosom in heaven that the poor man who died at the rich man's gate was borne by angels, according to the parable of the Saviour. In the 20th chapter of Exodus, the great moral law is found; that law defines sin; the Ten Commandments, written by the finger of God himself upon tables of stone. In two of these Commandments, the 4th and 15th, verses 10th and 17th, slavery is expressly recognized; and in none of them is there any thing against it; this is the moral law. In Leviticus, we have the civil on this subject, as given by God to Moses for the government of his chosen people in their municipal affairs. In chapter xxv. verses 44, 45, and 46, reads as follows:

44. "Both thy bondmen and thy bondmaids, which thou shalt have, shalt be of thy brethren, of the children of thy land; ye shall buy bondmen and bondmaids."

45. "Moreover, of the children of the strangers that do sojourn among you, of them ye shall buy and of their families that are with you, which they beget in your land and they shall be your possession."

46. "And ye shall take as an inheritance for your children after you, to inherit them for a possession, they shall be your bondmen forever; but over your brethren, the children of Israel, ye shall not rule one over the other with rigor."

This was the law given to the Jews soon after they left Egypt, for their government when they should reach the land of promise. They could have had no slaves then. It authorized the introduction of slavery amongst them when they should become established in Canaan. And it is to be noted that their bondmen and bondmaids to be bought and held for a possession and an inheritance for their children after them, were to be of the heathen round about them. Over their brethren they were not to rule with rigor.

The Southern system is in strict conformity with this injunction. Men of their own blood and own race, wherever born, or from whatever clime they come, are free and equal. They have no estates or classes amongst white men; to "upper or lower tondom" All are equals. These slaves were taken from the heathen tribes—the barbarians of Africa. In their households they are brought within the pale of the covenant, under Christian teaching and influence; and more of them are partakers of the benefits of the Gospel than ever were rendered so by missionary enterprise. The wisdom of man is foolishness; the ways of Providence are mysterious. Nor does the negro feel any sense of degradation in his condition; he is not degraded. He occupies and fills the same grade or rank in society and the state that he does in the scale of being; it is his natural place; and all things fit when Nature's great first law of order is conformed to.

Again: Job was certainly one of the best men of whom we read in the Bible. He was a large slaveholder. So, too, were Isaac and Jacob, and all the Patriarchs. But, it is said, this was under the Jewish dispensation. Granted. Has any change been made since? Is any thing to be found in the New Testament against it? Nothing: not a word. Slavery existed when the Gospel was preached by Christ and his Apostles, and where they preached it was all around them, in its worst form. They were sold with a scroll hanging around their neck, on which their good and bad qualities were specified. Those not warranted, were sold with a kind of cap on their head. Those brought from beyond the seas had their feet whitened with chalk, and their ears bored. The masters had absolute control over them, and could put them to death at any moment without judge or jury. Individuals were allowed to sell their own children into slavery, and many did so, such was the strong love for gain. There was no regular marriage among slaves; but they lived in an actual state of concubinage; owing to this system, they were called "Contubernales." St. Paul was a friend to the fugitive slave law, as will be seen by the Scriptures, as he sent a runaway slave, Onesimus, back to Philemon, his master.

Lecture. The Lecture by Mr. Walker, last Thursday evening, reflected much credit on the lecturer. He seems to have been a minute observer of affairs and men while in the East; and with an easy and pleasant power of description, he enchaind the entire attention of the audience during the evening.

Invitation. At a Parish Meeting of the First Congregational Society, of this town, held last Monday, they unanimously voted to invite the Rev. C. C. Vinal, of Andover, to settle as their Pastor, at a salary of twelve hundred dollars a year.

For the Patriot.

Defence.

We have seen in a card issued by the late Inspector of this District, who was recently removed from the Boston Custom House, that he therein states as the reason why he was discharged, was on account of his not voting for one of the worthy delegates chosen by the Democracy of this Congressional District to represent them in the National Democratic Convention to be held at Charleston next spring.

This allegation we think evidently bears upon the face of it malice or ill will; if not an untruth; for this very reason, if his opposition to the successful candidate had defeated his election, there would then have been some reasonable ground why Mr. Wales should have favored his removal; but as this was not the case, and our delegate having been chosen on the first ballot by a handsome vote, causing his statement to fall to the ground, and exonerating Mr. Wales from this charge; as he had no reason to regret Mr. Bicknell's exertions to defeat him, or care how he voted. We know that Mr. Wales possesses too much magnanimity to resort to paltry means of this nature; even if there had been a cause for it, to injure a fellow member of the Democratic party; as he believes in the doctrine that every man has a right to vote for whom he chooses.

The idea of questioning Mr. Wales' Nationality, is preposterous, as every one knows that he has stood for years foremost in our ranks as an unwavering, staunch, and uncompromising National Democrat, free from all the factiousisms of the day. We, as a Democrat, and a Delegate to the said Convention, heartily and cheerfully, unasked, unpledged, cast our vote for Mr. Wales; believing in so doing, that he would be the right man in the right place.

We have no ill will toward Mr. Bicknell, and have made these remarks simply in defence of what we considered justice towards the Democratic party and those who supported so high minded a National Democrat as Mr. Bradford L. Wales.

JUSTICE.

Christ Church, Quincy.

Mr. Editor: I see that Christ Church, Quincy, has been burned to the ground.

In the kind and quiet report of its ten ex-Rectors, in the Protestant Churchman, it is said that "Not one had patience to stay long enough to die there." One of them came pretty near it; he staid seven years, and then sank so near to death's door, as to be carried out of the parish on a couch or bed, attended by a skilful physician and his wife and sister, and was three years in recovering a portion of his health. The living ex-Rector writes this; not to make such an unimportant fact known, but to express a hope that the Parish will re-build the Church of stone. President John Adams having left the material to the Parish, in the event of re-building. He, the ex-Rector, will give out of his own salary, fifty dollars towards the building of stone.

Almshouse.

On a recent call at the Almshouse, we were gratified to find it so well kept. The inmates cheerful, happy and contented, having an abundance of every thing required for their necessary wants, and enough of it, provided for them in a judicious and economical manner. The Keeper and his assistants, seem to anticipate the wants and desires of the Town's Poor, and administer every thing in reason to make their declining years and days happy. They relate with pride their sumptuous Thanksgiving dinner; having, as they say, had as good Turkey and fixings as any one in town; it weighing fifteen or eighteen pounds. It was pleasant to witness the contentedness of those who have been forced to submit to the benevolent charities of the town.

Obituary.

At Brattleboro' (Vt.) Asylum, on the 12th inst., Mr. Peter Hardwick, aged 52 years and 6 months.

The deceased had been laid aside from the active duties of life, and deprived of his reason, which rendered him unsafe at home for a time, and he was carried to Vermont and placed in the Asylum for the Insane. Though thus remote he was not forgotten.

Conscientious in the performance of every duty, and faithful in all the relations of life. A tender and devoted husband, a kind and affectionate brother, and a warm and generous friend and neighbor.

But he has gone to his final home, leaving many loved friends to mourn his loss. But stop not here afflicted ones, look beyond the tomb and see him forever freed from pain and suffering where the weary are at rest.

Deaths.

In this town, on the 25th inst., Mr. Moses Nightingale, aged 66 years and 10 months.

What the New York City folks say of Dr M'Lane's Celebrated Vermifuge, manufactured by Fleming Bros.

New York, August 25, 1859.

This is to certify that I am well acquainted with a man fifty years of age, for many years a resident of this city, who has been at times extremely ill, but could not tell from what cause, unless it was worms. He told his attending physician his suspicions, but the physician at once ridiculed the idea, and refused to attend him any longer. His son then mentioned M'Lane's Vermifuge, and asked him if he would take it; his reply was—I must take something to get relief or die.

They at once procured a bottle of Dr M'Lane's Celebrated Vermifuge, and he took one-half at one dose. The result was, he passed upwards of three quarts of worms, cut up in every form. He got well immediately, and is now enjoying most excellent health; and, like the good Samaritan of old, is endeavoring to relieve his unfortunate neighbors. He makes it his business to hunt up and select all cases similar to his own, that may be given over by regular physicians, and induces them to try Dr M'Lane's Vermifuge. So far he has induced more than twenty persons to take the Vermifuge, and in every case with the most happy results. He is well satisfied that Dr M'Lane's Vermifuge, prepared by Fleming Bros. of Pittsburgh, is far superior to any other known remedy, and that it more generally known would not fail to save many valuable lives. For further particulars inquire of Mrs. Hardie, 124 1-2 Cannon Street, New York City.

Purchasers will be careful to ask for Dr M'Lane's celebrated Vermifuge, manufactured by Fleming Bros. of Pittsburgh, Pa. All other Vermifuges in comparison are worthless. Dr M'Lane's genuine Vermifuge, also his celebrated Liver Pills, can now be had at all respectable drug stores. None genuine without the signature of Fleming Bros.

Poetry.

Now and Then.

Now is a constant warning stroke
Beat by the ceaseless clock of Time;
A voice our wisdom to evoke,
A mandate solemnly sublime;
It bids us keep the soul awake,
To do the best our means allow—
To toil for truth and virtue's sake,
And make the effort now.

Now is the watch-word of the wise,
And often was its wondrous way,
Through hosts of dangers in disguise,
That wait to rattle and betray;
The specious then doth of deceive,
Bring pain of heart and gloom of brow;
But would we some good work achieve,
Let's make an effort now.

Now glides the banner of the brave,
And prudence waits to see its end;
That taints him with its power to save
From vain remorse and sad unrest;
Then leads us by an easy rein,
And breaks our will intended vain;
But would we earn some sterling gain,
Let's make an effort now.

Then may not come, but Now is here,
All ready at our own right hand;
Perchance with aspect full severe,
Yet prompt to help, if we command;
Strike with it, and its blessings fall
Like sweet fruit from a laden bough;
But these will turn to husks of gull
If we neglect the Now.

In youth, if just ambition fires,
And seems to lift the soul on wings—
If heart glow with pure desires,
For worthy and exalted things—
Wait not, but raise your latent power,
Nor shrink, your wishes to avow;
The only safe, propitious hour,
Is the fresh and foremost Now.

In manhood, with our passions strong,
Oft hard to conquer or to guide;
If some insidious power of wrong
Has drawn our latent evil aside;
Sorrow will come—regrets and fears
Will make the humbled spirit bow;
But to atone for wasted years,
Is the task of the true Now.

If 'mid the world's rude shock and strife,
Thou hast no sense of things divine,
No yearning for the holier life,
Oh, what a boundless loss is thine!
If thou wouldst hope, strength, comfort find,
God's oracles will tell thee how;
Go with a meek, unerring mind,
And hear its voices now.

Procrastination, foe to bliss—
Cure for more baneful than it seems,
What treasures have we lost by this,
In vain and unsubstantial dreams!
From this dear moment let us start,
With brave endeavor, righteous vow;
Up, dropping soul!—up, languid heart!
And seize the golden Now.

Stillness of Time.

Time moves his way 'mid ragged grounds,
And mows his swath 'mid clods and crowns,
Without a clink, or rattle;
And secretly he bears his wounds,
On life's great field of battle!
So soft he treads upon the mould,
So silently he "goes" and "is told,"
We scarcely know we're growing old.

So silent is his march below,
"Throughout this world of 'weal and woe,'"
His footsteps fall so gentle,
That even Age forgets there's snow
Upon his dusty mantle!
So soft he treads his daily route,
We quite forget the ever, devout—
Forget our senses are running out.

Day steals to Night, with noiseless ear,
And passes like a shooting star;
And while this "cool" is shuffling,
We scarcely feel our pulses stir,
So deep the heart is muffled
The wheels move round as noiselessly
As boats trail down the summer sea,
"Where heaven is all tranquility."

The mighty engine speed its way,
While on, and on, from day to day,
As fresh as in life's morning,
Unto our childhood's dreaming May,
We seem again returning!
Again the summer wreath we twine,
Where fields with roses are a shine,
As erst we did, in "auld lang syne."

And it is well that thus it be—
In such a changing world as this;
For, did Time's ocean murmur,
Or did we hear his crater hiss,
Our life would have no summer!
Our life would be a faithless show,
Like rows buried under snow,
Where the Polar whirlwinds blow.

Oh Time! our old—our secret friend—
When then, at last, dost lowly bend,
To cast aside thy mantle;
When then dost thou pronounce the End?
Oh wilt thou speak as gentle?
Oh, wilt thou then as kindly seem,
And make the change a care-less dream,
Like transit down a summer stream?

Anecdotes.

A medical student joined, with our invitation, a party dining at an inn. After dinner he boasted so much of his abilities, that one of the party, said—
"You have told us enough of what you can do; tell us something you cannot do."
Faith, said he, I cannot pay my share of the reckoning.

Why don't you buy a thimble, and what do you call it, to sweep your side-walk with every morning? inquired one neighbor of another.

Because I ain't got no what's-its-name to buy it with, replied the neighbor.

PACKARD'S Great Regenerator for the HUMAN HAIR.

IS now to be known to need any further recommendation from any source. Yet to satisfy the most credulous, I will publish the following testimony.

Hartford Sq., Dorchester, Mar. 30, 1859.

MR. PACKARD—SIR: I have given your Regenerator a fair trial and find it all you claim for it. My hair was very gray; it is now restored to perfect color. All the humor is removed from the scalp. In short, I have now a perfect head of hair. I am willing to go before any Justice of the Peace and make oath to the above, if you wish it.

What it has done for him it will do for everybody that will use it.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, Feb. 4th, 1860.

"BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE."

CONGRESSIONAL. After two months wrangling, and forty-three ballots, Ex Governor William Pennington, of New Jersey, has been placed in the speakers chair at Washington. He represents the Fifth District of his State, and was chosen over a Leocompton Democrat, by a general union of the opposition elements. The newly elected Speaker in fact is called a Whig, and we presume is of that class who have acted with the Republicans out of opposition to the Democracy.

The following is the vote for Speaker—

Whole number present,	233
Necessary to a choice,	117
Pennington, of New Jersey, (Repub.)	117
McClelland, of Illinois, (Dem.)	85
Gilmer, of North Carolina, (Amer.)	19

The rest of the votes, fifteen in number, were given to several individuals.

UNIVERSALIST LEVEE. It is superfluous for us to mention that the Universalists hold their Annual Levee on Wednesday evening next, as everybody and their families are sure to be there; and they are never disappointed in having a pleasant evening's entertainment. The "Old Folks' Concert," is attraction enough in itself to fill the Hall; not to mention that "Mammoth Chord," got up in regular Hook and Ladder style.

PICTORIALS. Reading & Co., 8 State street, have the latest London Illustrated Pictorials for their Boston counter. They are the largest wholesale and retail dealers in New York Pictorials in the city. They supply orders from every part of the civilized world.

HIGHWAY CASE. In the case of Isaiah P. White of this place, vs. the town of Dorchester an action brought to recover damages for a defect in the highway, lately tried in the Superior Court at Dedham, the jury were unable to agree upon a verdict. The case will probably be tried again.

ADAMS LITERARY ASSOCIATION. We would call the attention of the public to the notice in our columns of a Lecture to be delivered by that able and well known lecturer, Wendell Phillips, Esq. As there has been no lecture before the Lyceum this season, this Association has taken upon its shoulders the responsibility of furnishing that deficiency. It is hoped that this step by the Managers of the A. L. A. S. will meet with a cordial welcome by the literary of our community, and that our citizens generally will respond to this call, to hear from those classic lips, words of eloquence and truth. The audience fee is placed within the reach of all who may feel desirous of availing themselves of the opportunity of enjoying a rich intellectual treat. We hope the experiment will be crowned with success, as in such an event, we are promised a repetition from some of our most gifted lecturers.

THE GOLDEN AGE. Mr. Helper in his researches for proof, to establish the theory of the superiority of the Free over Slave States, in point of agricultural and other products, appears to have forgotten one important item.

He should have struck deeper—searched farther—made himself familiar with the beautiful science, which the sage of Melrose, Mr. Burman, has so long made a favorite study.

The improvement in the domestic fowl, has latterly attracted much of the attention of the wise and good of our latitude; and we are now reaping the fruits of their enterprise. We have a young pullet in our aviary, not twelve months old, a remarkably fine fowl, whose first maidenly ovation, measured two and half inches in length and three and a quarter in width—containing meat enough within its brittle covering, for a common man's dinner.

Talk no more about tall grass, and such like things, but thrust this fact home upon the South, and when she becomes convinced that all Nature is on our side, and that even our poultry, from principle, are straining their very gizzards, in the race of supremacy, she must kneel under.

Think of this Mr. Helper—also Mr. Wilson—it may help you to a new theme for another teaching speech.

LECTURES. Mr. Walker is to repeat his highly interesting lectures of "Incidents of Travels in the East," before the citizens of Weymouth, commencing on Wednesday of next week. We can assure our neighbors in advance, that a rich intellectual treat is in store for them.

Friend Wilson, (not Henry) has a celebrated "Balm of Life." Call and see him.

Boston Correspondence.

Boston, Feb. 2, 1860.

Small Pox excitement—Brief notice of the Vaccine and Small Pox Diseases.—Old Colony and Fall River Railroad to be extended to Newport—Anti-Slavery Society. Presidency of Harvard University.—Professor Felton.

There is much excitement in and around Boston by reason of the Small Pox. The cases in each locality where they exist, are few and generally mild; but there is evidently much alarm from this loathsome disease. In Boston, about a dozen deaths occur weekly from Small Pox. The Varioloid is but a mild form of the disease. As a preventive, re-course is properly had to vaccination. It had long been known in England, that the peculiar eruption common on the tests and udders of cows, was communicated to the milkers; and that persons so infected were always exempt from the Small Pox. This induced the immortal Dr. Jenner to investigate the subject, and in the year 1798, he announced to the world, that the disease of the cow just alluded to, when conveyed into the human system, was a preventive to the Small Pox, and that it was communicated from one person to another by inoculation. Its efficacy has been fully established in every part of the globe. Dr. Jenner died in 1823, one of the greatest benefactors of the human race. The third day after inoculation, a small red spot like a flea bite appears. On the fifth and sixth, matter is formed in the pustule; on the eighth day the pustule is fully formed. On the tenth the areola or ring is fully formed. On the sixteenth day the scab is thrown off. To exhibit these legitimate symptoms the matter must be pure. The Small Pox is a contagious disease, occurring but once during life. It has existed in China and Hindostan from the remotest periods. From these places history tells us it reached Arabia in the sixth century, and Europe the eighth century. There are two kinds—the distinct, when the pustules are separate, and confluent, when they run together. The former is not dangerous, the latter is. The symptoms of the Small Pox, are fever, pain in the head and drowsiness. On the third day generally, there appears on the face and then on different parts of the body, until the fifth, small red spots. About the sixth day, these spots grow into pimples surrounded with a rose colored base, having upon the summit a small vesicle, containing a colorless fluid. When the pustules are numerous, the face swells, the throat is sore, the eyes are closed, and a spitting occurs. About the ninth day, pustules are fully formed, containing opaque matter; about the eleventh, the swelling of the face subsides, and falls upon the feet. The pustules soon after break, discharge their matter, and form a dry scab, which soon falls off, leaving pits upon the skin. By the seventeenth day, in mild cases, all symptoms usually depart. The confluent Small Pox, is more severe, and if the termination is fatal, occurs about the eleventh day. It may be laid down now as a rule of caution, that it is safer to repeat vaccination, than to omit it, until it ceases to have any influence on the system. The medical attendant being the best judge. Would it not be well to have an article inserted in the Annual Town Meeting warrant soon to occur, in respect to taking measures at the public expense for a general vaccination. Presuming a brief notice of the Small Pox and its preventive might be interesting at this time, I have given to the subject a part of this letter.

The Annual Meeting of the Stockholders of the Old Colony and Fall River Railroad was held on the 26th ultimo. The old Board of Directors was re-elected, and full power given to them to extend the road from Fall River to Newport. The distance is about eighteen miles, and it probably will be done as soon as practicable.

The Massachusetts Anti-Slavery Society held their Annual Meeting of two days and evenings in length, last week, at the Metropolitan. The proceedings were exciting and the views advanced radical in the extreme. Frederick Brown of Ohio, a brother of John Brown was present and made a short speech. It is to be regretted that the high talents and moral character of such men as Wendell Phillips, Edmund Quincy, and William L. Garrison, could not be directed to better objects than a dissolution of this Union. Denouncing the Constitution as a compact with hell, and still keeping up the cry of "No Union with Slaveholders." The violent course of Northern Abolitionists, is retarding rather than helping negro emancipation. The Union must be preserved at all hazards, and he is a traitor to his country and deserves the fate of John Brown, that will wage war against the union of these States. The highest allegiance that men owe, next to the love of God, is to his country however bounded.

Professor Cornelius Conway Felton is soon to become President of Harvard University. He graduated from that Institution in 1827, and is a man of letters. This makes the twentieth President old Harvard has had since 1640; making the exact average of eleven years to each presidential term. The whole number of persons who have received degrees at Cambridge to 1857, was eight thousand nine hundred and sixty-one, but alas! Some five thousand have passed away. The presidency of this college is the highest literary honor, that can be conferred on any man in this country, and we believe Mr. Felton will wear the laurels wisely and well.

[REPORTED FOR THE PATRIOT.]

Malicious Destruction of Fruit Trees AT SOUTH QUINCY.

On Sunday night, January 22d, the orchard of Mr. Eli Hayden of this town was entered by some ill-disposed person or persons, who destroyed some forty choice fruit trees by breaking them down.

On Monday morning, Mr. Hayden, in company with others, traced the foot-prints of the supposed intruders, sanguine, from pre conceived opinions, that they were on the right track. Mr. H's suspicions had become aroused, and his perceptive faculties illuminated, through certain communications received from a friendly spirit, (he being a believer in Modern Spiritualism) that the aggressions had been committed by two young men—Robert and William Boyle—who live in the neighborhood. On the strength of such evidence, a formal complaint was entered, and they were arrested by officer French, and arraigned before Justice Adams, on the Wednesday afternoon following. J. M. Gourgass, Esq., appeared as counsel for the prosecution, and E. F. Hall, Esq., of Weymouth, for the defendants.

The first witness called was Eli Hayden, who testified to his trees being broken down, and destroyed, and to tracing foot prints from the orchard to the house where the defendants boarded.

E. A. Hayden, son of the complainant, was next called; his testimony was more particularly confined to the foot-prints. He exhibited a leather pattern, which he said corresponded in size and shape with the foot-prints in the orchard and in the yard where the defendants boarded. He described the foot-prints as being made with a fashionable tap sole boot.

His Honor here said his knowledge of boots was not very complete, and wished to know what a tap sole boot was. The important information was furnished by an "Expert."

At this stage of proceedings, the Counsel for the Government, called for the boots of Wm. Boyd, as he wished to use them as evidence, and alleged the defendant had on the identical boots answering to the description, and requested to have them removed.

The Counsel for defendants objected to any such illegal and unheard of proceedings. He argued the defendants were presumed to be innocent until adjudged guilty. They were under the protection of the Court; that their persons and property were sacred and no power in law could molest them. As defendants they were not bound to furnish a particle of evidence for the government to make out the case. If the prosecution wanted such evidence, they should have furnished themselves with it before the case was opened.

Counsel for government acknowledged, in his experience, the case was without precedent; when a defendant's boots were taken off in open court and used as evidence against him; but he contended the general principle was correct: that the government was entitled to what they considered evidence of guilt wherever they may find it; and cited the case of Burman, of "Extend notoriety" where the Supreme Court ruled that no property was exempt as evidence, on the ground that it was private property.

Counsel for defence replied, if a defendant was alleged guilty of pilfering an apple, and the prosecution presumed he had eat the same—they, on the same ground, would claim the privilege of performing a surgical operation on the defendant, in open court, to obtain evidence of his guilt.

Counsel for government. Not exactly so; but should claim the privilege to administer a powerful cathartic to obtain the desired evidence.

The Court acknowledged the point in question outstripped his judicial knowledge and experience. A doubt remained in his mind as to the legal mode to proceed; but he should take the responsibility to give the government the benefit of the doubt, and order the defendant to remove his boots and deliver them up to the Court.

The defendant readily and willingly complied with the order of the Court: a box of soil was provided—and after some discussion as to who should be considered an "Expert" to compare the imprint of the boot and the leather pattern—the Judge, Counsel, witnesses and spectators, went into a "Committee of the Whole." The experiment exhibited a discrepancy of one inch between the length of the boot and the pattern.

The next witness of any importance examined, was Edwin A. Adams, who testified that at quarter past twelve o'clock, on Sunday night, he heard a noise like the breaking down of trees in Mr. Hayden's orchard, but saw no person there.

Mrs. Pennington testified that the defendants boarded with her; that William Boyle was at home and went to bed at a quarter past ten o'clock on the night named, and Robert Boyle was also at home by eleven o'clock.

The prosecution rested the case here, having no more testimony to offer. The Counsel for defendants made a motion that the defendants be discharged without submitting any evidence, as the government had failed to prove the defendants had any connection with the crime charged in the indictment.

The Court after summing up the evidence, discharged the prisoners.

ANOTHER COLD SNAP. On Wednesday morning last, the thermometer in this town, was from six to ten below zero. It has put our coal dealers in the best humor; our Skating Park in prime order; and Young America in excellent spirits to enjoy the sport. But how transitory are our joys; while putting this in type, a furious snow storm is raging without, threatening to bury their fond anticipations under a avalanche of trouble.

CLERICAL. Rev John T. Burrill, of South Boston, and formerly of this town, has received and accepted a call from Christ Church, Salem Street, as Rector, and will enter upon the duties of his office on Sunday next.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, No. 185 Suffolk street, says of Dr. M'Lane's Celebrated Liver Pills: "Being unwell, and not knowing whether it proceeded from derangement of the liver or merely hysterics, I was persuaded to purchase a box of Dr. M'Lane's Celebrated Liver Pills, prepared by Fleming Bros., Pittsburgh, and before I had used them all, was entirely relieved. I am now enjoying perfect health, and cheerfully recommend Dr. M'Lane's Celebrated Liver Pills to all similarly afflicted."

New York, March 25, 1852.

Purchasers will be careful to ask for Dr. M'Lane's celebrated Liver Pills, manufactured by Fleming Bros., Pittsburgh, Pa. All other Vermifuges in comparison are worthless. Dr. M'Lane's genuine Vermifuge, also his celebrated Liver Pills, can now be had at all respectable drug stores. None genuine without the signature of Fleming Bros.

Much has been said of the Eastern Escalapius' labors for the sick; not one half has yet been told of the indomitable perseverance of this singular man. Imbued with the conviction that Scrofula is the parent of disease, he has been years engaged in searching the boundaries of the earth, for its antidote. With vast labors has he canvassed the products of sea and land through both continents until he has discovered that combination of remedies which expurgates this human rot and corruption from the system. This new invention we now offer in our columns under the name AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. Although its virtues are from substances far more active and effectual than Sarsaparilla.—Mercantile Journal.

A surgical operation was performed by cutting into the windpipe and extracting the cork, but the operation was too painful for the little sufferer, and death ensued.

The Best Medicine in the World.

YES, DECIDEDLY THE BEST, IS

Root and Herb Bitters.

THEY are made from the most valuable Roots, Herbs and Plants in the vegetable kingdom. They act at once upon the very seat of disease. They remove all obstructions from the internal organs—regulate the Bowels—purify the Blood—remove Humors—excite the Liver to a healthy action, give strength and tone to the stomach—cure Jaundice and Dyspepsia—create an appetite—renew the blood—renew the circulation—remove all Bilious diseases—cure Cures, Headache, Weakness, &c., and are the best medicine ever discovered for all Female Complaints. They purify, heal, strengthen, build up, and keep in order "the house you live in."

Doctor's prescriptions clothed in Latin verbs, Now yield the palm to Langley's Roots and Herbs.

For a vile drug and call from Nature's store, As did the Patriarchs in days of yore.

Roots, Herbs and Barks, the best in Nature's store, From broad Atlantic to Pacific's shore.

From North to South their healing virtues lend, And in these Bitters prove the people's friend.

They'll strengthen, warm, your bodies vigorous make, Rouse drooping spirits new blood create.

So if you wish to feel well—act well—do well, and keep well, use this standard valuable medicine.

Only 25 cents for a pint, and 38 cents for a large Bottle.

Three Chances of Luck.

Two journeymen wood-carders were crossing through a small wood to their new master's, when they saw a couple of fishes, a pike and a golden carp, lying in the middle of the pathway, having probably dropped from some fisherman's basket.

What a dainty morsel either of them might make, observed the younger of the two, who, though greedy, was laziness itself; only it's too much trouble to carry them away, to say nothing of the trouble of cooking them.

So saying, he pushed the fishes out of his way with the tip of his shoe.

His companion, who was staidier and more thoughtful, observed he would not mind the trouble, only the fishes were heavy, and it might lose time to carry them away, and they would get belated. But as they can't profit us, and as nobody is likely to come by in this lonely spot, I'll put them back into their native element, said Watty.

Thereupon he flung them both into a stream that ran babbling along between some neighboring bushes. They had not gone far before they met a man with a fishing-net over his shoulder, and other implements that implied he belonged to the craft of fishermen, though he had a strange unearthly countenance, and streaming locks that gave him a very wild appearance.

Where's my fish? said he, in a rough voice.

The elder wood-carder immediately replied, I'm sorry you didn't come sooner, master fisherman, or you should have had them.

And then he explained why he had returned them to the water; observing that he had always honored the maxim, "Waste not, want not."

The stranger's eyes now twinkled with a kindly expression.

You have returned two of my subjects to my watery kingdom, said he; which is what you sort of folks seldom do. And since I should have bought them of you, had they still been in your power, it is but fair to reward you all the same. You may ask for anything you like, and shall obtain it.

The wood-carder now perceived that he had to do with the Nix, or water-sprite belonging to the stream, and taking off his cap respectfully, answered in a humble, though manly tone, well, since your lordship is pleased to reward such a small service, why, suppose, (here he looked at his card, which he held in his hand) that is to say, if your lordship pleases, I should be quite satisfied if I could always find my card full of prime wool.

It is granted, said the Nix, who had disappeared by the time the two friends, who had been somewhat awe-stricken, again ventured to raise their eyes.

Watty now looked at his card, and behold! it was full of the finest wool imaginable.

My fortune is made! said he, dancing about for joy. Now I'll set up on my own account, instead of hiring myself to a new master. I shall never want work, as I shall always have wool; and I'll employ you, Tommy, for nobody shall ever say I forgot my friend in my good luck.

At what a foolish job you've made of your wish, objected Tommy, peevishly, when you were about it, why didn't you ask his lordship for plenty of money, and then, indeed, we might have been comfortable.

Why, man, isn't this wealth? cried Watty, taking out a handful of wool, from the card, which yielded its fleecy treasures like so much smoke coming out of a chimney. With a little industry we shall presently be rich. What more can heart wish for?

Wish, quotha! ejaculated Tommy; why, a ready-made fortune, without any work or trouble, to be sure.

And as they walked along, he kept repining at the Nix's churlishness in not bestowing a wish on himself as well, just as if the benefit conferred on his friend were the greatest injury done him, although Watty had so generously offered to make him a sharer in his good fortune. Presently they emerged from the road, and reached the spot where the stream into which the fishes had been thrown disgorged itself into a little lake.

This must surely be the Nix's head-quarters, said Tommy; so here shall I stop until his spiritship comes up with the water, and gives me something.

It was in vain Walter urged that the Nix would not come at anybody's bidding, and that it was only wasting time to loiter about in such a hope; his lazy companion declared he would not move a step further, especially as he had no need to go to work, since there was to be no end of the wool which was to maintain them.

Watty shook his head, saying, You'll never learn that larks won't fall ready roasted into your mouth. I'm afraid you'll live and die a lazy fellow. And with this he went his way briskly to make up for the lost time, intending to offer his new employer a bundle of wool to cancel their agreement, and set up for himself.

On being left alone, Tom began calling aloud on the Nix to come out of the water; but he might have bawled till he was hoarse, for any attention that seemed likely to be paid to his adjurations. Then he flung away his card with great contempt as a useless tool, and sauntered up and down like your town idler, with his hands in his pockets, and whistling a tune. He next set to carving his name on a tree, only he did not get beyond the first letter, because even this was

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, Feb. 18th, 1860.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTH DAY. Wednesday next will be commemorated by all true Americans throughout the universe, in joyful demonstrations; and we hope that the spirit which was implanted in us by the Father of our Country, will, on that day, burst forth in all its forms. The Hancock Light Guard are to make this day of much interest to our citizens, by firing a salute, ringing of bells, and in the evening by giving a grand promenade concert and levee, at which Gilmore's celebrated and renowned band, comprising ten pieces, will execute some of their most popular and well adapted national airs, marches, etc. We hope to see this day made one of general observance—a legalized holiday all over the country. The Randolph Glee Club are also to be present, and during the evening, will perform some of their favorite pieces.

TOWN CLERK. We are requested to state that our young and worthy Town Clerk, Franklin Curtis Esq., respectfully declines being a candidate for the office of Clerk in this Town. He is to leave in a few weeks for California on business.

NOT SO BAD. The injury received by Mr. Chamberlain, which it was feared at first might be serious and perhaps fatal, by being thrown from a pile of boards, in the gale of Saturday last, we are happy to say, is able to be about again. The cause of the accident, as related to us by him, was as follows: Observing a pile of boards on the wharf was being damaged by the wind, he left the counting-room to secure them; and while ascending the pile, something struck him on the side of the head—he don't know what—and that is the last he recollects of the affair—until consciousness returned, and he found himself in bed, at his own house. He has come to be thankful it was no worse.

TEMPERANCE. Mr. W. S. BAKER, of Boston, it will be perceived, by a card in another part of our paper to-day, will deliver a lecture on the subject of Temperance, tomorrow evening, commencing at half past seven o'clock. Mr. B. is a mechanic—therefore a practical man. He deals with his subject in a workmanlike manner—heart and soul he enters the work. He understands the weak points of human nature well—particularly those of the working classes; no man, therefore, is more competent to administer to their infirmities or to give them good and wholesome advice.

THE MASSACHUSETTS MILITIA. According to the Annual Report of Adjutant General Stone, (to whose kindness we are indebted for a copy) the number of enrolled militia in this State in 1859, was 154,112. The number of active militia was 57,339—making a total of 157,851. The active force is divided as follows among the several arms: Light Artillery, two companies; Light Dragoons, four; Cavalry, 1; Infantry, 71. Cadets, two; Riflemen, 7; total, eighty-seven. The expenses of the Department in 1859, were $62,038, a decrease, including the saving in straw, forage, &c., of $20,000.

TRIAL OF STEPHENS AND HAZLITT. The trial of Stephens, one of the Harper's Ferry prisoners, commenced at Charleston, (Va.) on the 3d instant, and concluded the next day. The speeches of counsel were mostly of a political character. The jury returned a verdict of guilty. The trial of Hazlitt was then commenced. It had been thought doubtful whether he could be identified as one of the insurrectionists, but the jury were satisfied with the evidence, and returned a verdict of guilty.

The Grand Jury have found bills of indictment against Owen Brown, Francis J. Meriam and Jeremiah Anderson, charging them with conspiring with slaves to create insurrection. None of these latter have been apprehended.

THE NEXT PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION.—The total number of votes cast by the next Electoral College will be 305. Of this number the Northern States have 136; the Southern States 120. Number of votes necessary to elect a President, 154.

A NOVEL INSTITUTION. A new bank, called the Pawner's bank, has just gone into operation, in Boston. It is designed to take the place of the ordinary pawnbroker's shop, by lending money on the deposit of personal property at a cheaper rate than they do. The charge is one and a half per cent. per month, whereas pawn brokers not unfrequently charge from thirty to forty per cent. per month.

CONFIRMED. The nomination of Gen. James S. Whitney, at present Superintendent of the United States Armory at Springfield, as Collector of the Port of Boston, has been confirmed by the United States Senate. Arthur W. Austin having been removed. The appointment of Gen. W. is one of the best that could have been made, and will give great satisfaction.

A Magnificent Dry Goods Palace

George W. Warren & Co. opened their elegant new store, at 242 and 244 Washington street, February 7. This establishment has several features which are worthy of especial mention. The entrance from the street is into a spacious black walnut vestibule, where ladies can stand while waiting for carriages or for passing cars and omnibuses. From here they pass into the magnificent sales room, one hundred and forty-eight feet long by sixty in width, and seventeen feet high. The paneled ceiling is supported by handsome Corinthian pillars. At the lower end of the room five magnificent mirrors are set into the wall, in silver plated frames, adding much to the beauty of the store. They are each nine feet high by six wide, were imported from Paris expressly for this establishment, and are the best kind manufactured. A mirror of equal size occupies a prominent place in one of the side walls, half-way down the room. These mirrors were furnished by Horace Barnes, No. 123 Washington street, and cost about $250 each.

The store is lighted in a peculiar manner, there being windows over the shelves, giving a better light than is found at any other dry goods store in the city. Gas pipes run along the cornices above the shelves, from which project one hundred bronze Cypres, each of which, when occasion requires, can give a jet of flame. There are also in the room eleven bronze chandeliers, and another chandelier is placed in the vestibule, throwing a light into the street. These chandeliers, and all the gas burners in the store, were furnished by N. W. Turner, No. 23 Broadfield street, and were manufactured by Cornelius & Baker, Philadelphia.

There are in this room five hundred feet of mahogany counters, circular in form, and of the best finish. The top projects out fifteen inches, thus allowing the patrons to approach close to the counter, without inconvenience from full dresses. By these counters are one hundred and eighty four stationary seats, where ladies can be seated while being waited upon. These counters, and all the carpenter work of the room, was from the shop of J. F. Paul, Tremont street, and some idea of its extent may be derived from the fact that forty men have been engaged for four weeks, simply in "fitting up" the room, the counters having been previously made.

The Cashier's desk, conveniently located near the centre of the room, was made by Stephen Smith, No. 51 Cornhill, and cost exclusive of the counter on which it rests, about $800.

Adjoining this is a feature peculiar to this store—a room where ladies can remain while waiting for the arrival of friends, or for any other purpose. It is fitted up with a marble-topped sink, and suitable furniture, and from it is an entrance into a retiring room.

Next to this room is a dark room, lighted only by gas, for the display of goods suitable for evening wear.

Passing from this room down a broad and easy stair-way, the visitor enters a basement room, over sixty feet square, where house-keeping goods and cloths, and stuffs for boys' wear, are sold. This is fitted up with paneled cases, of a peculiar style, where blankets and quilts are kept without exposure to dust. Adjoining this is the hat and cloak room for the one hundred and twenty clerks of the store, and the bundle rooms, where all parcels to be sent out, are done up. There is free communication all through the establishment by means of speaking tubes and bells, furnished by Geo. Z. Moody, No. 25 Devonshire street. The store is owned by Wm. T. Andrews.

This firm now, for the first time, enters into the business of selling at wholesale, and the arrangements for this department are on the same liberal scale as characterizes the retail department. A building has been erected especially for this business, the entrance to which is from Avon Place. It forms an L in connection with the retail store, from the rear of which is also an entrance. The building is sixty feet by forty wide, and is five stories high, besides the basement. The first story is devoted to the sale of silks, gloves, and the costlier fabrics, and here is the book-keeper's room, large, well-furnished, and conveniently located. On the second floor the various kinds of dress goods are displayed, and here is the private office of the firm, and a convenient room for the sale of goods by samples.

Upon the third story, shawls, cloaks, &c., are kept, and the fourth story is to be used for the manufacture of cloaks, which in the busy season will employ about one hundred and fifty girls. The room is provided with every convenience necessary for their comfort. The fifth story is for storage, and here will be sleeping rooms for watchmen, etc. This building is extremely well lighted, by large windows through which the light has free access. Besides this, a portion of the basement, under the retail department, is to be used in connection with the wholesale trade. In the basement are also large and safe vaults, in which the books, &c. of the firm are to be kept. The goods are all received on Central Court, in the rear of the retail store, and can be readily hoisted to any story upon which they are to be displayed.

The place is heated by steam from a boiler placed in the rear and separate from the building, so that there can be no danger from explosion or fire. This work was done by Walworth and Nason. The gas metre is one of the new and much improved dry metres, which have recently come into use in London. The gas-piping for the Avon Place store, which is owned by F. W. Andrews, was furnished by A. P. Stanwood & Co. Elegant curtains and Venetian blinds for both stores were furnished by C. L. Fowle & Co., No. 282 Washington street.

Taken in all its departments, for convenience, both to patrons and to those employed, for beauty and taste in design, and for completeness in all its details, we doubt whether the establishment has its equal in the United States, and when it is added that the shelves and cases are filled with new and elegant goods, of every kind and pattern, it cannot be doubted that thousands will visit the place, to admire and to patronize.

For the Patriot.
The Old Town Bell.

MR. EDITOR:—I have recently learned that there is something to be done in regard to the frame work of the old bell which belongs to the Town, and has hung for many years in the belfry of the Unitarian Church. The frame work, as the most of the citizens of Quincy are well aware, has been in active service for a long time, not only on this, but on a former bell, and has become rotten, rickety and unsafe, and certainly there ought to be something done; but instead of getting a new frame for this small old cracked concern, would it not be advisable to get a large, sweet-toned bell, with a good apparatus, and the Town will then have what it much needs, for several reasons, viz:—

1. What sense is there in taxing our citizens to pay for ringing the bell twice a day, when one-half the inhabitants cannot hear it? Would it not be better and more satisfactory to have a bell that all could hear?

2. If a large bell occupied the place of the present one, the original hammer which came with the Town Clock could be used, and the people could hear it strike at all parts of the town, in calm weather; when at the present time it can be heard but a short distance.

3. The Town can receive twenty-eight cents per pound for the old bell; and all that is charged for a new one would be but thirty-four cents.

For the Patriot.
Dancing.

MR. EDITOR:—It is conceded, we believe on all hands, that "Dancing" is not only a pleasant but healthy amusement, if restrained within the bounds of propriety. For instance, let us examine our own town's people, as an example. We are rightly led to believe that at our different assemblies of pleasure, where dancing is made a prominent feature of the evening's entertainment, that imprudence, in regard to the health, is oftentimes committed.

At our "Leves" it would be considered very improper, and highly indecorous, if at midnight the lights should be extinguished, and the party notified that the evening's amusements had closed and it was time for them to be seeking their respective homes. No; most of these convivial assemblages are kept up until daylight—and even then they are loth to separate; and, likewise, the pernicious habit of feasting—of partaking of a hearty supper, and without rest, participating in the most fatiguing exercise.

From our own experience we are prepared to reiterate against such unseasonable hours, and the exposure of health and the consequences. Our halls are generally filled with a dense mass of dust, arising from currents of air, which are inhaled, and with it, oftentimes disease and death.

We speak our mind freely on this subject, because we consider it an important one, especially to the young and inexperienced. We do not wish to imply, however, that dancing is not in itself, proper. We enjoy a good dance as well as any one, and believe it not only an innocent, but a healthy and pleasant recreation, when indulged in moderation, and an accomplishment which all should acquire, who desire to appear well in company, without embarrassment or restraint. We have a "Model Party," so we have been informed, that meets regularly every fortnight, in accordance with these principles, at an early hour in the evening, and closes precisely at twelve o'clock, which is well supported, giving entire satisfaction. If the above suggestions shall have any weight with your readers, my object and aim will have been effected.

FIRE IN BRAINTREE. The stable, slaughter-house and buildings connected, in Braintree, belonging to Samuel S. French, were discovered to be on fire last Tuesday morning at half-past one o'clock, and were entirely consumed, together with several cows, horses, carriages, and a lot of hides of the value of about five hundred dollars. The whole loss amounts to $1800; insured for $500. The fire was the work of an incendiary.

THE GALE. The violent gale of Thursday night and Friday of last week, was most disastrous in New York city and vicinity, where buildings were unroofed, vessels sunk, wharves demolished, &c.

A woman of Patuxent, Ohio, went, during the heavy blow, to draw a pail of water, when a gust of wind caught and threw her head foremost into the well. She was soon missed, and after some time her body was found, but life had departed.

A CALL. Rev. James Pratt, a native of this town, and at present the Rector of the "Church of the Covenant," in Philadelphia, has received an invitation to settle in Chicago, (Ill.) at a salary of four thousand dollars a year.

LECTURE AT TOWN HALL. The lecture by Wendell Phillips, Esq., on Tuesday last, at the Town Hall, was, as it regards numbers, a failure—the Hall was not more than half filled; although the lecture was admitted by all who heard it, as one of that gentleman's happiest efforts. The subject was the early history of St. Domingo. The Association are not discouraged by this circumstance, but are determined at an early day to make another trial. Success attend them.

A fellow in North Carolina had been imprisoned for having three wives, and broke jail. A gentleman recognizing him, and met him to dinner, thinking to get the reward that was offered for his apprehension—After dinner he gentleman slipped out for a constable, and came back to find that the culprit had absconded with his own wife.

Professor Cornelius C. Felton has been chosen President of Harvard College, in place of Rev. Dr. Walker, resigned.

Many people drop a tear at the sight of distress, when the dropping of a sixpence would serve a much better purpose.

SMALL POX. There has been no new case reported. Vaccination and other preventives appear to have "snuffed" the critter out.

PENMANSHIP AND BOOK-KEEPING. We are happy to learn that Mr. Payson who has been giving lessons in these very useful branches of education, to a large number of our citizens, has given such complete satisfaction, that he has been urgently requested to form another class. From an examination of the improvements made, we heartily advise all those who wish to acquire a rapid and beautiful Hand-writing—or a thorough knowledge of Book-keeping—to avail themselves of this opportunity.

Mr. Payson is one of the Principals of the Boston Mercantile Academy, and author of "Payson, Danton & Scribner's Copy Books," so extensively used in our schools. He has much experience, and is very popular as a teacher. His new class will meet on Tuesday next: Afternoon, from 3 to 5—Evening, from 7 to 9 o'clock.

He will also continue to give private lessons to any who may desire them.

A word to the wise is sufficient.

PLEASING FACTS. Thousands, of all ages and sexes, have found instant relief by the application of Redding's Russia Salve to burns, wounds, scalds, bunions, sores, corns, chilblains, etc. It never fails in effecting speedy cures. For sale everywhere at 25 cents a box.

LOSS OF SLEEP. If there is anything more wearing to both mind and body than loss of sleep, or if any difficulty or disease can be often traced to other than loss of sleep, then experience has lost its power, or Sidney Smith, the great English Physiologist, is not to be relied upon. Of this, let the experience of thousands answer, and try the Tolu Anodyne, and they will be ready to endorse the remark of one of the friends of the proprietors, who writes, "were the directions to be covered with sovereigns to purchase, I would not be without it." This all will experience by its use. See advertisement, and call for pamphlets.

No family should be without them.—We speak of M. Lane's Liver Pills prepared by Fleming Bros., Pittsburgh, Pa., which have become an indispensable Family Medicine. The frightful symptoms which arise from a diseased Liver manifest themselves, more or less, in every family; dyspepsia, sick headache, obstruction of the bowels, ague and fever, pains in the side, with dry hacking cough, are all the results of hepatic derangement—and for these Dr. Lane's Pills are a sovereign remedy. They have never been known to fail, and they should be kept at all times by families.

DIRECTIONS. Take two or three going to bed, every second or third night. If they do not purge two or three times by next morning, take one or two more. A slight breakfast should invariably follow their use.

The Liver Pills may also be used where purging is simply necessary. As an antacid purgative, they are inferior to none. And in doses of two or three they give astonishing relief to sick headache; also in slight derangements of the stomach.

Purchasers will be careful to ask for Dr. M. Lane's celebrated Liver Pills, manufactured by Fleming Bros. of Pittsburgh, Pa. All other Vermifuges in comparison are worthless. Dr. M. Lane's genuine Vermifuge, also his celebrated Liver Pills, can now be had at all respectable drug stores. None genuine without the signature of Fleming Bros.

Aged Christian, greatly respected. All thy care forever over, Gathered to thy Saviour's breast, Thou didst seek his smile before.

Ended now thy lengthened road, Which long thy footsteps trod, Laden with Earth's weary load, Ever drawing nearer God.

We will look with hopeful eyes, Dimmed while with sorrow's tears, To thy home beyond the skies—Free from every doubt and fear.

May our lives be bright as thine; Strong in faith and pure of heart, Till Heaven's glories shine, We shall meet no more to part.

Poetry.

For the Patriot.
The Baby.

F. M. ADLINGTON—WEYMOUTH.

The baby in its cradle bed
Was laughing in its sleep.
Oh, come! his little sister said,
Come, mother, see your peep:
He's laughing 'tough to split his side—
What makes him, tell me, do?
I cannot tell his mother cried,
But, Jenny, cannot you.

You told me, mother, 't'other day,
That Angels live above,
And that they like to hear me pray,
And that they listen to my love.

You said, perhaps, unseen around,
They guard the baby's head;
Perhaps they light upon the ground,
Or sit upon the bed.
I guess to see him laugh and crow,
The Angels hovering near,
Are whispering funny stories now
In little baby's ear:

And that's what makes the baby laugh.
The mother, musing, smiled—
Although the world might call you daff,
You may be right my child.

The Old Maid.

Tell me why, though a maid be old,
Her praise may not be sung?
And why her tale may not be told,
How she too once was young,
And lovers came, and lovers wooed,
Yet left her to pine in solitude.

Her dear old schoolmates all are gone;
Her sisters all are wed;
And in cruel hours she twined the flowers
To deck the beautiful head
Of one who stole the heart away
On which her own was set.
And made her rue the luckless day
When a lover came and a lover wooed,
Yet left her to pine in solitude.

Year after year she dwells alone,
While the world flies gently by;
And the tears they start in her aching heart,
But they never dim her eye;
For her grief in her secret soul abides,
And she wears a cheerful air,
While in her bosom the treasure she hides
Like the lock of a lost one's hair,
And dreams of the lover who came and wooed,
Yet left her to pine in solitude.

Proudly she bears her sorrowful head,
Weathered only with Winter curls;
Bravely she bears the pines and jears
The world at the old maid hurle;
For she knows that the lot of woman is hard,
And that in the rude battle of life
Her bosom must often be wounded and scarred,
Whether maiden, or mother, or wife;
So, though lovers come, and lovers wooed,
She would half prefer her solitude.

O! say not her heart is selfish and cold,
And that nothing her love can arouse;
For who but she, to the sick and old,
Is the angel in every house?
Yes, in trial and trouble the old maid is near,
With a balm for all our woes,
And she e'en lends an ear and drops a kind tear,
When to her the young maiden goes,
To tell of the lover who came and wooed,
Yet threatened to leave her to solitude.

Then tell me why, though the maid be old,
Her praise may not be sung?
And why her tale may not be told,
How she too once was young,
And lovers came, and lovers wooed,
Yet left her to pine in solitude.

Deal Gently.

In tones of gentle accents speak,
If e'er a brother fall;
If you his stubborn will would break,
Sue not his wrath with gall.
How sweet and tender are the words
Which flow from hearts that feel!
They vibrate on the tender cords,
And only braise to heal.

Bring these and like rich music's swell,
Upon a placid lake,
Which swim within the heart and dwell,
And grateful thoughts awake.

Anecdotes.

When Dr. Johnson courted Miss Porter, whom he afterwards married, he told her, that he was a man of mean extraction, that he had no money, and that an uncle of his had been hanged!

The lady by way of reducing herself to an equality with him, replied:
"That she had no more money than himself, and though none of her relations had been hanged, she had fifty who deserved hanging."

A teacher, who had an intolerable habit of talking to himself when alone, was asked by a neighbor what motive he could have, in talking to himself?
Jonathan replied that he had two good and substantial reasons:
In the first place, he liked to talk to a sensible man; in the next place, he liked to hear a sensible man talk.

The servant of a Prussian officer one day met with a crows, who inquired how he got along with his fiery master.
Oh, excellently! answered the servant; we live on very friendly terms—every morning we beat each other's coats. He takes his off to be beaten, and I keep mine on!

There, Charlie, that's twice you've come home and forgotten the lard.
La, mother, it was so greasy that it slipped my mind.

Dr. M'Lane's CELEBRATED VERMIFUGE AND LIVER PILLS.

WE beg leave to call the attention of the Trade, and more especially the Physicians of the country, to two of the most popular remedies now before the public.

We refer to Dr. Chas. M'Lane's Celebrated Vermifuge and Liver Pills.

We do not recommend them as universal Cure-alls, but simply for what their name purports, viz.:

THE VERMIFUGE, For expelling Worms from the human system. It has also been administered with the most satisfactory results to various Animals subject to Worms.

THE LIVER PILLS, For the cure of LIVER COMPLAINTS, all BILIOUS DERANGEMENTS, SICK HEAD-ACHE, &c. In cases of FEVER AND AGUE, preparatory to or after taking Quinine, they almost invariably make a speedy and permanent cure.

As specifics for the above mentioned diseases, they are Unrivalled, and never known to fail when administered in accordance with the directions.

Their unprecedented popularity has induced the proprietors, FLEMING BROTHERS, PITTSBURGH, PA.

to dispose of their Drug business, in which they have been successfully engaged for the last Twenty Years, and they will now give their undivided time and attention to their manufacture. And being determined that Dr. M'Lane's Celebrated Vermifuge and Liver Pills shall continue to occupy the high position they now hold among the great remedies of the day, they will continue to spare neither time nor expense in procuring the Best and Purest material, and compound them in the most thorough manner. Address all orders to FLEMING BROS. Pittsburgh, Pa.

P.S. Dealers and Physicians ordering from others than Fleming Bros., will do well to write their orders distinctly, and take note that Dr. M'Lane's, prepared by Fleming Bros., Pittsburgh, Pa. To those wishing to give them a trial, we will forward per mail, post paid, to any part of the United States, one box of Pills for twelve three-cent postage stamps, or one vial of Vermifuge for four three-cent stamps. FOR MEN & BOYS' C. GILL & CO.'S Quincy, Dec. 10th.

Dr. M'Lane's CELEBRATED VERMIFUGE AND LIVER PILLS.

WE beg leave to call the attention of the Trade, and more especially the Physicians of the country, to two of the most popular remedies now before the public.

We refer to Dr. Chas. M'Lane's Celebrated Vermifuge and Liver Pills.

We do not recommend them as universal Cure-alls, but simply for what their name purports, viz.:

THE VERMIFUGE, For expelling Worms from the human system. It has also been administered with the most satisfactory results to various Animals subject to Worms.

THE LIVER PILLS, For the cure of LIVER COMPLAINTS, all BILIOUS DERANGEMENTS, SICK HEAD-ACHE, &c. In cases of FEVER AND AGUE, preparatory to or after taking Quinine, they almost invariably make a speedy and permanent cure.

As specifics for the above mentioned diseases, they are Unrivalled, and never known to fail when administered in accordance with the directions.

to dispose of their Drug business, in which they have been successfully engaged for the last Twenty Years, and they will now give their undivided time and attention to their manufacture. And being determined that Dr. M'Lane's Celebrated Vermifuge and Liver Pills shall continue to occupy the high position they now hold among the great remedies of the day, they will continue to spare neither time nor expense in procuring the Best and Purest material, and compound them in the most thorough manner. Address all orders to FLEMING BROS. Pittsburgh, Pa.

P.S. Dealers and Physicians ordering from others than Fleming Bros., will do well to write their orders distinctly, and take note that Dr. M'Lane's, prepared by Fleming Bros., Pittsburgh, Pa. To those wishing to give them a trial, we will forward per mail, post paid, to any part of the United States, one box of Pills for twelve three-cent postage stamps, or one vial of Vermifuge for four three-cent stamps. Quincy, Sept. 27.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, is a constitutional disease, a corruption of the blood, by which this fluid becomes vitiated, weak, and poor. Being in the circulation, it permeates the whole body, and may burst out in disease on any part of it. It is the source of its attacks, and is there one which it may not destroy. The scrofulous taint is variously caused by mercurial disease, low living, dis-ordered or unhealthy food, impure air, filth and filthy habits, the degenerating vice, and, above all, by the venereal infection. Whatever be its origin, it is hereditary in the constitution, descending from parents to children unto the third and fourth generation; indeed, it seems to be the rod of Him who says, "I will visit the iniquities of the fathers upon their children."Its effects commence by deposition from the blood of corruption or ulcerous matter, which, in the lungs, liver, and internal organs, is termed tubercles; in the glands, swellings; and on the surface, eruptions or sores. This foul corruption, which renders in the blood, depresses the energies of life, so that scrofulous constitutions not only suffer from scrofulous complaints, but they have far less power to withstand the attacks of other diseases, and, consequently, are much more liable to disorders which, although not scrofulous in their nature, are still rendered fatal by this taint in the system. Most of the consumption which decimates the human family has its origin directly in this scrofulous corruption; and many of the destructive diseases of the liver, kidneys, brain, and, indeed, of all the organs, arise from or are aggravated by the same cause.One-quarter of all our people are scrofulous; their persons are invaded by this lurking infection, and their health is undermined by it.

To cleanse it from the system, many covet the blood by an alternative medicine, and invigorate it by healthy food and exercise.
Such a medicine we supply in

AYER'S

Compound Extract of Sarsaparilla,

the most effectual remedy which the medical skill of our times can devise for this everywhere prevailing and fatal malady. It is combined from the most active and purest ingredients, and has been discovered for the expurga-tion of this foul disorder from the blood, and the rescue of the system from its destructive consequences.
Hence it should be employed for the cure of not only scrofula, but also those other affections which arise from it, such as Eczema and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Rheumatism, Syphilis, and Mercurial Diseases, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Debility, and, indeed, all constitutional diseases, arising from impure blood. The popular belief in "impurity of the blood" is founded in truth, for scrofula is a degeneration of the blood. The particular purpose and virtue of this Sarsaparilla is to purify and regenerate this vital fluid, without which sound health is impossible in contaminated constitutions.

AYER'S

Cathartic Pills,

FOR ALL THE PURPOSES OF A FAMILY PHYSIC, are so composed that disease within the range of their action can rarely withstand or evade them.

Their purgative properties search, and cleanse, and invigorate every portion of the human organism, correcting its diseased action, and restoring its healthy vitality. As a consequence of these properties, the invalid who is bowed down with rheumatism or physical debility is enabled to find his health or energy restored by a remedy at once so simple and invigorating.Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also many formidable and dangerous diseases. The following are some of the most common to which they are applied, and which they have cured: Constipation, Biliousness, Headache, Nausea, Indigestion, Liver and Biliary Dyspepsia, Dropsy, Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Sciatica, Hemorrhoids, Piles, and all the various diseases of the bowels, and of the urinary organs, arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions.

For the Patriot.

The Old Town Bell.

MR. EDITOR: In the columns of your last week's issue, I noticed an article from a "Citizen," in which he expresses his views and wishes in regard to a very important subject; which, I am happy to say, appears to meet with the hearty concurrence of three quarters of our people. It certainly seems very strange, that there has not been before this, no plea or action, brought before the public, to test the general disposition and feeling of the community in relation to this matter. It is a proud move, and should not be overlooked.

We are informed from a reliable source, that at the time the clock was placed in this tower, that our late esteemed fellow townsman, Daniel Greenleaf, Esq., was willing to contribute one quarter part, towards the expense of this public benefaction. By this, it will be seen, that a change was then contemplated and needed.

But some say, that the Parish is the party that receives all the benefit from this cause. I contend this is not the case. For, let me enquire, who receives the benefit of the ringing of the bell, twice every day, and the sounding of every hour in the twenty-four; besides, its deep-toned notes, which is sent forth on every public occasion.

Surely this enterprise should meet each one with a feeling of willingness. And should the Town feel disposed to favor this object, it would add much to the public convenience, and an ornament to this, our cherished home. We hope if the subject comes before our citizens at the approaching town-meeting, it will receive a cordial support; as the difference between an exchange of the old bell for a new one, of larger dimensions, is so trifling, that even to the most parsimonious, there can be no serious objection, in a pecuniary point of view.

CROSS.

The Poisoned Wife.

After an absence of five years, I returned to my native land. The promised correspondence with my friends had dropped off as usual. There are few who keep such promises. Letters are long coming, or miscarry. We postpone; we forget.

But now I had come back. As our good ship came up the Narrows, and I thrilled at the sight of the loved landmarks, I recalled the friends I was now every hour more anxious to see. After a few days in New York, where I had many friends, and some business to transact, I took the cars for my native village, which for the purpose of this narration, I will call Greenville.

A quiet, lovely place, where I had formed friendship and love; a friendship that had been the solace of my life—a love that had been its agony. The love had died in my heart, and was buried, and had its cold marble monument there; but the friendship lived, strangely lived, and was as warm as ever.

I say strangely. You will think so, for it was my friend who was my rival in love—my successful rival; but it was no fault of his. He loved the same beautiful being: he had the advantages of person and fortune, and won the prize. And so, five years before, I went to Europe, and now was on my way to see the friend of my youth, and the woman I had worshipped.

In that affair, long past, I was not the only sufferer. A gentle and most lovely, if not beautiful maiden, had loved my friend. They were often together, and the gossip of the village had engaged them. Edward Lewis had, I knew, a deep and tender friendship for Lizzy Lee. Had he not known my Aurelia, as I dared to call her then—and to call her so unchidden—I am sure he would have married, and been very happy with the gentle, dove-eyed Lizzy Lee. But the proud and passionate beauty, who held me, like a slave, in her chains, fancied my friend, and she had but to will it, to fascinate a stronger man than Edward Lewis.

They were married and happy. The last time I saw them, I was a groomsmen at their wedding, and Lizzy was bridesmaid. Oh! how this human pride can cover over aching hearts. I braved it out, and went to Europe. It was not much for a man to do. Lizzy had a longer and severer trial.

The reader may imagine the feelings with which I looked upon each rock, each tree, each house, in the familiar place. I went to the hotel, to wash off the dust of travel. In the bar-room, a group of men were talking excitedly, and I heard the name of my friend, Edward Lewis.

I tell you Lewis is guilty. He done it, and no mistake, said one.

What should he poison her for? I don't believe a man would do such a thing without a motive, said another.

Motives enough, if that's all, said a third, in a sinister manner that was very unpleasant to me. She was a plucky handsome woman, and men get jealous sometimes.

Edward Lewis was not a man to murder a woman from jealousy, said another.

Could it be that I heard aright. Edward Lewis charged with murder! My friend! I went up to this man and asked:

What is this about Edward Lewis?

He looked in my face inquiringly for a moment; then held out his hand.

Why, don't you remember me? said he. Can't you recollect Fred. Johnson?

It was him, sure enough; but as changed by his beard as myself. I left him a law student; he was now in practice as law partner of his former preceptor.

But this matter of Lewis? said I, too shocked to think of anything else—where is he?

In jail.

I started for the door.

Come Fred., said I, come along, and tell me on the way.

The case is this, said he, with lawyer-like precision. Mrs. Lewis, whom you knew, I believe, died very suddenly, two weeks ago. They are said not to have lived happily together. The gossip took up the matter; certain facts have come to light; there is a great excitement; and to-morrow the body is to be taken up, and an inquest held. Lewis surrendered himself, and it was thought best to commit him to jail to await the result.

But a poisoner—poison his wife! It is too absurd!

I hope so, indeed. It is a strange world. Here we are at the jail. A hard lodging for Edward Lewis. There is his fine house, said he, pointing to a beautiful villa, at a short distance.

Mr. Johnson left me, and I entered the little room where Edward Lewis sat at the table, writing. He did not know me at first, but the moment I spoke we were clasped in each other's arms. All that had separated us in the past was forgotten.

She is dead! were his first words, and here am I, in prison. They believe I murdered her.

But, Edward, what possible ground can there be for such an idea?

We had our estrangements and busy-bodies exaggerate them. I have grown irritable, and my harsh words have been repeated and enlarged upon. Aurelia was the picture of health, and she was suddenly taken sick, and died, after a few hours, in a very mysterious manner. Some words let fall by the physician were taken up: the excitement increased: I demanded an examination; and arsenic was found in a private drawer which contained some of my papers, and some old love letters—letters written long ago to Lizzy Lee. You see how the circumstances are against me. But her body is to be disinterred to-morrow, there will be an inquest and post mortem examination, and then the matter will be at an end.

Yes, unless she took poison herself.

There is no ground for such an hypothesis. No one loved life more. She was the last person in the world to commit suicide in her senses, and she had them perfectly.

The morrow came, and the inquest. I saw the coffin opened, and there lay Aurelia as fresh and blooming as if she had only fallen asleep. The perfect preservation of her body was itself the first evidence that the public excitement was not unfounded. The post mortem examination was conducted by two resident physicians, assisted by an eminent physician from New York, who had come prepared to make the usual tests for poison. As a physician, just returned from the schools of Paris, I was invited to assist at the examination. I could not do so professionally—my relation to the beautiful woman, whose cold form was submitted to the researches of science, did not permit me to give active assistance; but the life of my friend was in danger, and it was my duty to be present, watch the proceedings, and give any aid in my power.

The viscera was found as healthy as the rounded and rosy contour of the body indicated. Only in the stomach were the signs of inflammation. The tests were applied, and arsenic discovered. I saw them. There could be no mistake. The bottle was produced; the place where it was found proven; and the clerk of the only drug store in the place testified to having filled it, several months ago, for Mr. Lewis himself, who had bought it on the pretext of wanting it to kill rats with. It was shown by a servant that there were no rats in the house and had not been. Yet a considerable quantity of the poison had been used.

The coroner recited all the circumstances to the jury, and they brought in a verdict that Mrs. Aurelia Lewis came to her death by being poisoned with arsenic, and that the circumstances pointed to her husband, Edward Lewis, as the one who had administered it.

Upon this verdict, of course, the coroner issued his warrant. My friend was held for the action of the Grand Jury at the approaching term of Court, and, if indicted, for trial.

By the time the verdict of the inquest was made public, the excitement of the whole community had risen to the highest pitch. Everything Lewis had ever done was distorted. Many professed to have always had a bad opinion of him. His heartless desertion of Lizzy Lee was brought up against him, while she was congratulated on having escaped from marrying a murderer. The more charitable believed that he had still preserved his love for Miss Lee, and that he wished to be rid of his wife, with whom he lived unhappily, that he might marry her.

I went to the prisoner's cell. He had heard of the verdict. The coroner's commitment had been served upon him, and he sat with folded arms trying to grapple with his fate.

I held out my hand to him. Courage, said I; there is a God over all.

I hope so, he answered gloomily. You do not believe me guilty?

No! Strong as the circumstances seemed, I knew my friend, and I could not for a moment entertain the conviction of his guilt.

Fred. Johnson came in with his senior partner, Esquire Britton, a tall gentleman, of the old school of lawyers. Lewis had retained them as counsel, and they came to consult. Fred. introduced me to Mr. Britton, who did not remember me in the dimly-lighted room, and with my changed appearance.

This is my friend, said Lewis. Talk freely before him, and consult with him. I have nothing to conceal.

But you know, Mr. Lewis, that the lawyer, as well as the physician, requires entire confidence. Any reservation might imperil a better case than yours. The best thing you can do is to make a clean breast of the whole matter—all acts and motives. Then we shall know what we have to meet, and be able to make the best defence the law will warrant.

Edward started to his feet, and his brow flushed. I tell you gentlemen, before God, that I know nothing of this matter. I had no notion to murder my wife. I bought the bottle of arsenic at her request, and for the reason she gave me. I never saw it again. The drawer where it was found I have not opened for years. In fact, I lost the key not long after I was married, and never got another. I know no more of the matter than you do, so help me God!

There was an earnest sincerity in all this that satisfied, I believe, even the cold and cautious Mr. Britton.

But which way to turn. The court would sit in a few days. The excitement of the community against the supposed murderer was fearful. The lawyers could suggest no theory of defence but that of suicide; and that, the purchase of the poison and the place of its concealment, rendered a forlorn hope.

In one of my walks I met Lizzy Lee. She was a little thinner than when I had seen her last, as bridesmaid to Aurelia—scarcely paler. She seemed glad to see me, though her smile was full of sadness. We walked along the quiet lane that led to her mother's cottage, each thinking of the subject we both avoided.

all the leading events previous and following our struggle for Independence. We have given below inscriptions upon these four Tablets. Before transcribing these inscriptions, we wish to make a few remarks upon another point. It is this: We hope this Legislature will have sense enough to remove from the Dome Hall of the State House those cannon which a previous Legislature ordered to be placed there, by a resolution which they passed; which resolution wrongly states that they were taken from the British at the battle of Bennington, and are trophies of this celebrated American victory. How these pieces of ordnance could have been taken at this battle when it occurred in 1777, and these cannons were not cast until 1780, is a mystery we are not able to solve. We know of no mathematical rule or problem whereby 1777, can be made to appear anterior to 1780; but very likely they can. As our Legislature of late has been quite prolific in changing the nature and natural order of things; white is made black, and black transformed to white—as was the case with the Ethiopian Ministry. It has been thought more expedient to allow Treasurers of Savings Institutions to pocket the funds than the Depositors; and that extended stimulants are more beneficial than the genuine, in assuaging and relieving the sick and afflicted. In all probability, in ages to come, their proceedings will be read with as much interest as the Arabian Nights, Munchausen, or any other fabulous records. It is time the Legislature left off humbugging themselves, and commenced doing something for the benefit and advantage of their constituents.

QUERY. Isn't it singular, Mr. Editor, that those who know so much are so foolish as to murder themselves. But isn't it truly so. Those who have not noticed it, should look at the corpulent political hack, who took the lead of the "Insurance clerk."

KEEN WIT. Prentice, of the Louisville Journal, is full of wit and does not seem to care where his arrow hits. He says one of the dullest men we ever saw was named Sharp, one of the stupidest was named Smart, one of the slowest was named Swift, one of the tallest was named Low—and the ex Governor of Virginia is named Wise Prentice had better be careful to avoid Virginia in his travels.

A TRUE SENTIMENT. "Old Massachusetts—Always the leader in what is great, good, useful and patriotic, she established the first school, college and academy in the United States, set up the first printing press, published the first book and newspaper, coined the first money, caught the first whale, hoisted the first national flag, sent the first ship to discover the islands and continents in the South Sea, dug the first canal, built the first railroad, produced the first philosopher, fired the first gun in the Revolution, put her hand first to the Declaration of Independence, gave John Bull the first licking, invented Yankee Doodle, and gave a name forever to the universal Yankee nation;" and, we might add, supplies all the other states with Quincy Granite, with which to erect their most magnificent edifices.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, MARCH 8 1860.

Business.—Legislature.—Savings Banks.—Harvard College.—Charlestown.—Bill for Colored Men to Train.—Congress.—The Presidency.

The review of the week indicates quiet in a business and political sense. Trade is slowly reviving but cannot be said to be active in any branch. Neither is it expected that it will be brisk at present. The merchants buy with caution, as commerce offers nothing in prospective very cheering to our shrewd merchants. Navigation continues on a limited scale, and vessels of most every class when sold, go off low. Ship-building may be better than last year, though not with the activity, that would give a healthy impetus to commercial enterprise.

The times have arrived, when a competency, to say nothing of a fortune, can only be acquired by a rigid practice of diligence and economy. The money market is more easy and the banks readily discount on good paper.

The State Legislature is on its third month, and some important matters are before them. A bill has been introduced in the Senate requiring every Savings Bank to invest at least forty per cent of its deposits in first mortgages on Real Estate. It is obvious, that the passage of such a law would produce a favorable effect, especially on mechanics engaged in house building; provided loans could be obtained as low as five hundred dollars and upward. It would lead to the building of a class of houses, much desired, and secure many deserving families happy homes, as it would be desirable to make the loans for a long term if the interest is promptly paid. The trouble now is, that many of our Savings Banks, decline or are forbidden by their by-laws, to loan sums less than three thousand dollars, and then on property double the value, excluding almost every man of moderate means, from any benefits by borrowing from these institutions.

By investing more of their money in Real Estate, and in small sums, the community would be greatly benefited. It is better for society at large that every man with small means should have a house of his own than to hire. It leads to thrift and frugality.

There has been some difficulty in the election of Trustees of Harvard University, all growing out of theological views. It is high time that Harvard College, should be divorced from the State Government, and scheme of Charlestown with Boston is defeated two to one in the Senate. Enlarging the area of Boston the present moment, finds but little favor.

The Bill allowing the Colored men to be enrolled in the militia, has passed the Senate by a large majority. There are hopes that the House may be more judicious, and reject a measure so unwise. If concurred in by the House, and the Bill goes to the Governor, we hope for the honor of Massachusetts, he will promptly veto a proposed law, at war with the Constitution, and repugnant to popular sentiment.

In the National House of Representatives on Monday, a Resolution, somewhat lengthy, was offered and after a warm debate, adopted, to investigate charges of corruption in the Federal Government. The President and other officers are to be questioned as to whether money, patronage, or other improper means, have been used to influence legislation in Congress, and whether any officers have sought to defeat the execution of laws, or the President has declined to order the execution of the same. The Committee is also to inquire into the Post Office troubles; matters touching the Navy Yard, Public Works, &c. Also, what money was used in Pennsylvania for electioneering purposes; by whom contributed and how applied. The investigation offers a wide field of enquiry, and if divested of political bias, might be useful to the country. It is now construed, being the year of the Presidential election, as a movement for political capital in the coming campaign.

The great Speech of Mr. Seward in the United States Senate, evidently gives satisfaction to a large part of the Republican party, who now regard him as their recognized leader and director of public sentiment; while its influence will put the chances of Messrs. Bates, Cameron and Chase, in the shade, for the Chicago nomination. Mr. Seward's prospects increase daily, so that it seems a foregone conclusion, that he will get the Republican nomination for President, any how.

In the mean time, the prospects of Judge Douglas continue good for the nomination at Charleston. And accounts from all portions of the Union, are highly characteristic in his favor. We believe him to be sound on the question of Popular Sovereignty, and non-interference on the Slavery question, and that his election to the Presidency of the United States, as an exponent of these great political questions, would lead to peace and harmony throughout our country.

The Congressional Delegate from Washington Territory, states that "within one mile of the shores of the Sound there is more timber than can be found on all the tributaries of the waters of Maine."

A MAD OX: Mad as a March hare, came rushing through our streets, on Thursday morning last, followed by its owner, much to the dismay of our citizens. It appears that the poor brute, was up for slaughter, at the yard of Mr. French, in Braintree, and had received a stunning blow upon the head, when he broke loose—cleared the premises, scattering everything in his way, and took the highroad for this place. It was a real Galpin race, when they entered the town; the ox at its full speed, and Mr. F., on horseback, close in the rear. They went over the ground at a rapid rate; the calls were short and unexpected; he looked in for a moment upon our new Town Clerk, Mr. Gill; then quickly turned, and at a single spring, cleared the platform, and made his way for the Hancock House, where he came to a halt. Here he met the chlorinous repulse of a Mr. Baron, an athletic man, of Kentuckian proportions, who with an iron bar in his hand, made a valorous charge upon the infuriated animal—but it had no effect except an angry toss of the head, which unbalanced his opponent, landing him safely in a mud puddle. His last act was most as foolish as that of John Brown's—attempts to storm an old board fence—in which he became entangled, when his pursuers came up and soon made beef of him.

Rev. Mr. Forbush of Northboro' will preach in the Stone Temple to-morrow.

SUDDEN DEATH. The lifeless remains, of Mr. Dolan, a citizen of this place, was discovered Monday evening last on Granite street. Mr. D. was in ill-health—subject to bleeding at the lungs—an attack of which, it is supposed caused death.

Poetry.

Our Union.
BY JOHN G. WHITTIER.

The blood that flowed at Lexington,
And crimsoned bright Champlain,
Streams still along the Southern Gulf,
And by the lakes of Maine;
It floats in veins that swell above
Pacific's golden sands,
And throbs in hearts that love and grieve
—By dark Atlantic's strand.

It binds in one vast brotherhood
The trapper of the West,
With men whose cities glass themselves
In Erie's clear breast;
And those to whom September brings
The fabled social hours,
With those who see December's brow
Wreathed with gorgeous flowers!

From where Columbia laughs to greet
The smiling western wave,
To where Potomac sighs beside
The patriot hero's grave,
And from the gleaming Everglades
To Huron's lordly flood,
The glory of the nation's past
Thrills through a kindred blood!

Wherever Arnold's trail is told,
Or the names of the brave,
And glows with pride o'er Bunker Hill
Or Monticello's wide fame;
And where'er above the fray
The stars of empire gleam,
Upon the deck, or o'er the dust,
It pours a common stream!

It is a sacred legacy
Ye never can divide,
Nor take from village urchin
Nor the son of city pride,
Now the hunter's white haired children,
Who find a fruitful home
Where nameless lakes are sparkling,
And where lonely rivers roam.

Green dew his sword at Eatw,
And breathing Southern feet
Trod the march across the Delaware,
Amid the snow and sleet!
And, lo! upon the parchment,
Where the noted record shines,
The burning page of Jefferson Bears Franklin's calmer lines.

Could ye divide that record bright,
Or tear the names apart,
Then were written boldly there
With plume of hand and heart!
Could ye erase a Hancock's name,
E'en with the subtle edge,
Or wash out with Federal blood,
A Carroll's double pledge?

Say, can the South sell her share
In Bunker's heroic fight,
Or can the North up her boast
In Yorktown's closing fight?
Can ye divide with equal hand
A heritage of graves,
Or rend in twain the starry flag
That proudly o'er them wave?

Can ye cast lots for Vernon's soil,
Or chaffer midst the gloom
That hangs its solemn folds about Your common Father's tomb?
Or could you meet around his grave
As fraternal foes,
And wake your burning curses o'er
His pure and calm repose?

Ye dare not? is the Allegation Thunder-toned decree?
'Tis echoed where Nevada guards
The blue and tranquil sea,
Where roars the delighted clasp
Our flowery Southern shore,
And where, thro' frowning mountain gates,
Nebraska's waters roar!

As God Will.
FROM THE GERMAN OF JULIUS STRUM.
Pain's furnace heat within me quivers,
God's breath upon the flame doth blow,
And all my heart with anguish shivers,
And trembles at the fire that glows,
And yet I whisper—As God will!
And in his hottest fire, hold still.

He comes and lays my heart all heated,
On the hard anvil, indeed so
Int his own fair shape to beat it
With his great hammer, blow on blow,
And yet I whisper—As God will!
And at his heaviest blows, hold still.

He takes the softened heart and beats it;
The sparks fly off at every blow;
He turns it o'er and o'er, and heats it,
And lets it cool, and makes it glow,
And yet I whisper—As God will!
And in his mighty hand, hold still.

Why should I murmur? for the sorrow
Thus only forged—indeed would he!
It's end may come, and will, tomorrow,
When God has done his work in me:
So I say, trusting—As God will!
And, trusting to the end, hold still.

He kindles for my profit purely Affliction's glowing, fiery brand,
And all his heaviest blows are surely Inflicted by a Master-hand:
So I say, praying—As God will!
And hope in him, and suffer still.

Quoted.

A sick boy, dreadfully sick from chewing tobacco, lay on a store-box. Another boy sympathized with and cheered him, by saying:
"Grin and bear it, Bill—we've all got to come to it sometime. You'll get over it and by."

"Dick, why don't you turn that buffalo robe (other side) out; the hair side is the warmest?" "Bah, Tom; don't you suppose the animal knew how to wear his own hide?"

A man, fond of whist, once heard a child cry when sitting down to his game. "I always love to hear children cry," he remarked. "Why?" asked those about him. "Because, they are sent to bed then."

"Jones," said Brown, "aren't you rather extravagant, dressing up that boy of yours in patent leather boots?" "Yes," said Jones, "but it's all for my own convenience. I'd rather do that than be obliged to black them for him."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

A compound remedy, in which we have succeeded in producing the most effective alternative cure can be made. It is a concentrated extract of Para Sarsaparilla, so combined with other substances of still greater alternative power as to afford an effective antidote for the diseases Sarsaparilla is reputed to cure. It is believed that such a remedy is wanted by those who suffer from Strumous complaints, and that one which will accomplish their cure must prove a valuable service to this large class of our fellow-citizens. How completely this compound will do it has been proven by experiment on many of the worst cases to be found in the following complaints:—

SCURFULA AND SCURFULOUS COMPLAINTS, ERYTHEMA AND ERYTHRODERMA, ULCERS, WOUNDS, BLOTCHES, TUBERCLES, SALT RHEUM, TAIL HEAD, SPYRULUS AND SPYRULUS AFFECTIONS, MEDICINAL DISEASE, DROPSY, NEURALGIA OR TIC DOULOUREUX, DEBILITY, DYSENTERY AND INDIGESTION, ERYTHRODERMA, ROSE OF THE FACE, AND indeed the whole class of complaints arising from IMPURE BLOOD.

This compound will be found a great restorer of health, when taken in the spring, to dispel the foul humors which fester in the blood at that season of the year. By the timely application of this compound, the blood is purified in the bud. Multitudes can, by the aid of this remedy, save themselves from the endurance of foul eruptions and ulcers, and through which the system will strive to rid itself of corruption, if not assisted to do so through the natural channels of the body by an alternative medicine. Cleanse out the tainted blood whenever you find its impurities manifesting through the skin in pimples, eruptions, sores, ulcers, or other skin diseases. It is obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it whenever it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Even where no particular disorder exists, people enjoy better health, and live longer, for cleansing the blood keeps the system healthy, and all is well; but with this system of life disordered, there can be no lasting health. Sooner or later something will go wrong, and the great machinery of the system will be deranged.

Sarsaparilla has, and deserves much, the reputation of accomplishing these ends. But the world has been egregiously deceived by preparations of it, partly because the drug has not all the virtues that is claimed for it, but more because many preparations, pretending to be concentrated extracts of it, contain but little of the virtue of Sarsaparilla, and any thing else.

During late years the public have been misled by large bottles, pretending to give a quart of extract of Sarsaparilla for one dollar. Most of these have been frauds upon the sick, for they not only contain little, if any, Sarsaparilla, but often no curative properties whatever. Hence, bitter and painful disappointment as followed the use of the various extracts of Sarsaparilla which flooded the market, until the name itself is justly despised, and has become synonymous with imposition and cheat. Still we call this compound Sarsaparilla, and intend to supply such a remedy as shall rescue the name from the load of obloquy which rests upon it. And we think we have ground for believing it has virtues which are irresistible in the ordinary cases of skin diseases, and will cure. In order to secure their complete eradication from the system, the remedy should be judiciously taken according to directions on the bottle.

For the Patriot.

Woman.

As well might one strive to clutch the moon, and hurl it from its lofty seat, as to endeavor to destroy that aged, far-famed cultivator—progress. Woman, in ages past, has been looked upon as inferior to man; and subject, in a great extent, to his will. But as time glides along its endless course, with progress at the helm, she is becoming more respected, and the period is not very distant, when she will stand forth and exclaim, "We are subservient to no one's will, but our own and our God's." Advice will be gratefully received; but man, thou hast swayed the sceptre o'er us to thy full extent. No longer are we your subjects. We claim our sex is not inferior to yours. We are your equal. Why then ought we to permit you to rule us? Shall we, No, never. This is the spirit which I trust will be kindled in the souls of all women. Accursed is he who strives to deprive them of their liberty. But, woman—a large share of the blame for your not having attained a higher position rests on you. You cannot expect to speak and act for yourselves, while permitting the male sex to do it for you. Nor can you expect to become masters of your will, while yielding to that of others. Many of you perhaps, will say, I am free; I am not controlled by man. To you I would advise, be ye not too hasty in your remarks; reflect sufficiently first. Ask yourselves—do you have become wives—if you do not in a great degree, feel obliged to yield to the desires of man? Are you not a slave to him, in this respect? Do you possess courage enough to act your own will? If not, are you free? And also to all of you—do you dress for your own comfort? Is it not your aim to gratify the eye of man? Are you not controlled by his wishes and his tastes? Are you sufficiently independent to consult and be governed by your own feelings alone? If not, are you free? Also, if you are equal to man, ought you not to possess equal power to choose persons to administer the government—under which you live? Better officers we should have; better laws enacted; better government, if we were allowed to vote—to act. If you cannot do this, are you free? Why permit them, longer, this great wrong to prevail? Do not let another sun pass o'er thy head, e'er thou hast declared thyself free and independent. Free to act, to speak, to use thy will as your conscience may direct you. Heed not the sneers man may cast upon you, for desiring to be independent. Is it not natural for one to scorn any movement that deprives them of their power over another? Man, physically, may possess superior strength, but is this the standard by which we are to judge? If so, the Elephant claims the highest position. Reason, intellect, intelligence, these are the qualities which decide. And does not woman, oh, man? In my opinion, they do. If, then, you agree with this fact, do not longer hold power over them. Do not deprive them of their true rights. Grant them liberty to govern themselves. If woman does not possess sufficient independence to declare her rights, do not continue to take advantage of it, and rule her, but strive to make her conscious of her equality, and of her rightful claim to freedom. Grant it to her. Help her onward.

The Husband's Secret.

One day, a good many years ago, a young woman knocked at the door of a little cottage, in the suburbs of a little town of New-castle, upon Tyne. The knock was immediately responded to by the opening of the door from within. An aged woman, neatly dressed, and who had evidently risen from her wheel, was the sole inmate of the little cot.

Bless your heart, girl, said the dame, as she entered with her visitor, and sat down to the wheel again, there must surely be something particular about you to-day, for you did not use to knock.

I thought some one might be with you, mother, said the girl, who had taken a seat beside the spinner.

And though a neighbor had been here, replied the dame, that surely would not have frightened you away. But the truth is, you have something to say to me, Catharine, continued the speaker, kindly; out with it, my dear, and depend upon the best counsel old Hannah can give you.

Thy young woman blushed deeply, and did not speak.

Has William Horton asked you to become his wife, Catharine? said the dame, who easily and rightly anticipated the matter that was the thoughts of her youthful visitor. He has, mother, was the reply.

Well, my dear, said she, after a short pause, is not this what you have long expected, ay, and wished? He has your heart, and, I suppose, it needs no witch to tell what'll be the end.

This might all be very true, but there was something on Catharine's mind which struggled to be out, and out it came.

Dear Hannah, said she, seating herself by the dame, and taking hold of her hand, you have been a kind friend, a parent to me since my poor mother died, and I have no one to look for advice but yourself. I have not given William an answer, and I would not, until I had spoken to you; more especially as something—as you once said—

What did I say Catharine? interrupted the old woman; nothing against the man you love surely. He is, from all I have seen and heard, kind-hearted, industrious, and every way well-behaved.

Yes, Hannah, replied the woman; but you once said, after I had brought him once or twice to see you, you did not like those—those sort of low flits that sometimes fall upon him, even while in your company. I have often noticed them since, Hannah, continued Catharine, with a sigh.

Plague on my thoughtless tongue for saying such a thing to you, my dear child! He was a soldier, you know, a great many years ago, before he was twenty—and fought for his country. Perhaps he may have seen sights that make him grieve to think upon, without blaming himself. But whatever it may be, I meant not Catharine, that you should take such a passing word to heart. If he has some little cares, you will easily soothe him and make him happy.

As the worthy dame spoke, her visitor's brow gradually cleared away, and, after some further conversation, she left the cottage, lightened at heart with the thought that her old friend Hannah approved of her following the course to which her inclination led her.

Catharine Smith was indeed well entitled to pay respect to the counsels of Hannah. The latter had never married, and had spent the greater part of her life in the service of a wealthy family at Morpeth. When she was there, the widowed mother of Catharine had died at Newcastle, and Catharine, through a friend's circumstances, Hannah, though a friend merely, and no relation, had sent for the orphan girl, then ten years of age, and had taken care of her until she grew fit to maintain herself by service. On finding herself unable to continue a working life longer, Hannah retired to Newcastle, and Catharine immediately entered into service there. Hannah and Catharine had been two years in these respective situations, when the dialogue which has just been recorded took place.

On the succeeding expiration of her term of service, Catharine was married to the young man whose name has been stated as being William Horton. He was a joiner by trade, and bore as Hannah had said, an excellent character. The first visit paid by the new married pair was to the cottage of the old woman, who gazed on them with a truly maternal pride, thinking she had never seen so handsome a couple. The few years spent by Horton in the army had given to his naturally good figure an erect manliness, which looked as well in one of his sex as the light, graceful figure, and fair ingenuous countenance of Catharine was calculated to adorn one of the womankind. Something of this kind, at least, was in the thoughts of Hannah, when Catharine and her husband visited the dame's dwelling.

Many a future visit was paid by the same parties to Hannah, and on each successive occasion the old woman looked narrowly, though unobtrusively as possible, into the state of the wife's feelings, with a motherly anxiety to know if she was happy. For though Hannah, seeing Catharine's affection deeply engaged, had made light of her own early remark upon the strange and most unpleasant gloom occasionally, if not frequently observable in the look and manner of William Horton, the old woman was never able to rid her own mind altogether of misgivings in the subject. For many months after Catharine's marriage, however, Hannah could never discover anything but open, unalloyed happiness in the air and conversation of the youthful wife. But at length, Hannah's anxious eye did perceive something like a change. Catharine seemed sometimes to fall, when visiting the cottage, into fits of abstraction, not unlike those which had been observed in her husband. The aged dame had felt greatly distressed at the thought of her dear Catharine being unhappy, but for a long time she had held her peace upon the subject, trusting that the cloud might be temporary, and disappear.

It was not so, unfortunately. Though in their manner to each other, when together, nothing but the most cordial affection was observable, Catharine, when she came alone to see Hannah, seemed a prey to some uneasiness, which all her efforts could not conceal from her old friend. Even when she became for the first time a mother, and with all the beautiful pride of a young mother's love, presented her babe to Hannah, the latter could see signs of a secret grief imprinted on Catharine's brow.

Hoping by her counsel to bring relief, Hannah took an opportunity to tell the young wife what she had observed, and earnestly besought her confidence.

At this, Catharine stammered forth a hurried assurance that she was perfectly happy and in a few seconds belied her words by bursting into tears, and owning that she was very unhappy.

But I cannot, dear Hannah, she exclaimed, I cannot tell the cause—even to you. I don't say so, my poor Catharine, replied the dame, it is not curiosity that prompts me to interfere.

Oh, no, my dear friend, replied the young wife—I know you speak from love to me.

Well, then, continued the dame, open your heart to me. Am I a good adviser. Catharine was silent.

Is your husband harsh to you? asked Hannah.

No, replied Catharine; man could not be kinder to woman than William is to me.

Perhaps he indulges in drink; in—

Hannah, you mistake altogether, was her reply; my husband is free from all such faults as ever man was.

My dear child, said the old woman, almost smiling as the idea entered her head, you are not suspicious—and not jealous.

I never had a moment's cause, Hannah, answered Catharine. No, my griefs are not of that nature. He is one of the best and dearest of husbands.

Old Hannah was puzzled at these replies as she was distressed by the open avowal of Catharine's having some cause of sorrow; but, seeing that her young friend could not make up her mind to a disclosure at this time, the aged dame gave up her inquiries and told Catharine to think seriously of the propriety of confiding all to her.

Hannah conceived that on mature consideration, Catharine would come to the resolution of not wronging her husband, and their late conversation, the young wife came to visit Hannah again, and, after a little embarrassed talk, entered upon the subject which was uppermost in the minds of both.

Hannah, said Catharine, I fear you can serve me nothing; I fear no living being can serve me. O, Hannah, good as my husband appears to be—good as he is—there is some dreadful weight pressing upon his mind which destroys his peace—and mine too. Alas! the gloomy fits, which you as well as I have noticed in him, are not, I fear, without cause.

Catharine wept in silence a moment, and then continued:

All I know of this cause arises from his expressions—his dreadful expressions—while he is asleep at my side. Hannah, he speaks in broken language of murder—of having committed murder, Hannah! Perhaps he has deceived and killed a woman.

As Catharine said this she shuddered, and buried her face in that of her babe, which she carried in her arms.

Hannah was shocked to hear of this, but her good sense led her to suggest to the poor wife that it was possible for her husband to consider himself a murderer in his sleep, and speak of it, without the slightest reality in the whole affair.

Alas, Hannah, said Catharine, sadly, those dreadful sayings are not the result of one nightmare slumber. They occur often—too often. Besides, when I first heard him utter in his sleep these horrible things, I mentioned the matter to him in the morning, at our breakfast, and he laughed at it; but he grew agitated, and telling me to pay no attention to such things, as he sometimes talked nonsense, he knew, in his sleep, he rose and went away, leaving his meal unfinished—indecisively touched. I am sure he does not know how often he speaks in his sleep, for I have not mentioned the subject again, though my rest is destroyed by it. And then his fits of sadness at ordinary moments! Hannah, there is some mystery under it! Yes, continued the young wife, he is so good, so kind, so dutiful to God and to man! He has too much tenderness and feeling to harm a fly. Hannah, what am I to think or do, I am so wretched at present?

It was long ere the old dame replied to this question. She mused greatly on what had been told her, and in the end said to Catharine: My poor child, I cannot believe that William is guilty of what these circumstances lay seemingly at his door. But if the worst be true, it is better for you to know it than to be in this killing suspense forever. Go, and gain his confidence, Catharine; tell him all that has come to your ear, and say that you did so by my advice.

Hannah continued to use persuasion of the same kind for some time longer, and at length sent Catharine home, firmly resolved to follow the counsel given her.

On the following day, Catharine once more presented herself at the abode of Hannah, and as soon as she entered, exclaimed, Dear mother, I have told him all! He will be here soon to explain everything to us both.

The old woman did not exactly comprehend this. Has he not, she said, given any explanations to you?

No, Hannah, said Catharine; but, oh, he is not guilty. When I had spoken as you desired me, he was silent a long time, and he then took me in his arms, and kissed me, saying, my darling Catharine, I ought to have confided in you long before. I have been unfortunate, not guilty. Go to kind Hannah's, and I will soon follow you, and set your mind at ease, as far as it can be done. Had I known how much you have been suffering, I would have done this long before. These are his words, Hannah. Oh, he may be unfortunate, but not guilty.

Hannah and Catharine said little to each other until William came to the cottage. He sat down gravely by the side of his wife, and, after kindly inquiring for the old dame, Hannah, at once commenced to tell his story.

The reason of my unhappy exclamations in my sleep, which have weighed so much upon my mind, dear Catharine, may be very soon told. They arose from a circumstance which has embittered my own peace, but which I hope is to be regarded as a sad calamity rather than a crime. When I entered the army, which I did at the age of nineteen, the recruiting party to which I attached myself, was sent to Scotland, where we remained but a few days, being ordered again to the Continent. One unhappy morning, as we were passing out of the town where we had rested on our march southward, my companions and I chanced to see a girl apparently about fifteen years of age, washing clothes in a tub. Being the most light-hearted among the light-hearted, I took up a large stone, with the intention of splashing the water against the girl. She stooped hastily, and, when she rose, I saw the stone, ground, and I fear, her skull fractured. Supposed at what I had done, I stood gazing on the stream of blood gushing from my poor victim's head, when my companions, observing that no one had seen us, for it was then early in the morning, hurried me off. We were not pursued, and we were in a few weeks on the Continent. But the image of that bleeding girl followed me everywhere; and since I came home, I have never dared to inquire the result, lest I should be hung for murder. For I fear, from the dreadful nature of the blow, that the death of that poor creature lies at my door.

While Hutton was relating his story, he had turned his eyes to the window; but what was his astonishment, as he was concluding, to hear old Hannah cry aloud, "Thank God!" while his wife broke out into a hysterical passion of tears and sobs, and threw herself into his arms.

My dear husband, cried she, as soon as her voice found utterance, that town was Morpeth. It was, said he.

Dear William, the wife then cried, I am that girl.

You, Catharine? cried the amazed and enraptured husband, as he pressed her to his breast.

Yes, said old Hannah, from whose eyes tears were fast dropping, the girl whom you unfortunately struck, was she who is now the wife of your bosom. But your fears had magnified the blow. Catharine was found by myself soon after the accident; and though she lost a little blood, and was attended for a time, she soon roused again—Praised be Heaven for bringing about this blessed explanation!

Amen! cried Catharine and her husband. Peace and happiness, as much as usually falls to the lot of mortals, were the lot of Catharine and her husband, from this time forward, their great source of disquietude being thus taken away. The wife even loved the husband more from the discovery, that the circumstances which had caused her distress, were but a proof of his extreme tenderness of heart and conscience; and William was attached the more strongly to Catharine, after finding her to be the person whom he unwittingly injured. A new tie, as it were, had been formed between them.

A friend that you have to buy won't be worth what you have to pay for him; no matter how little that may be.

It is common to speak of those whom a flirt has jilted as her victims. This is a grave error; the real victim is the man she accepts.

The German Sunday Papers of (N.Y.) city, publish about 10,000 copies weekly.

Worth Knowing.

One pound of green copperas, costing seven cents, dissolved in one quart of water, and poured down a privy, will effectually concentrate and destroy the foulest smells. For water closets aboard ships and steamboats, about hotels and other public places, there is nothing so nice to cleanse places as simple green copperas dissolved; and for sick rooms, it may be placed under the bed in any thing that will hold water, and thus render a hospital, or other places for the sick, free from unpleasant smells. For butcher's stalls, fish markets, sinks, slaughter houses, and wherever there are offensive putrid gases, dissolve copperas and sprinkle it about, and in a few days the smell will pass away. If a cat, rat or mouse dies about the house, and sends forth an offensive gas, place some dissolved copperas in an open vessel near the place where the nuisance is, and it will soon purify the atmosphere.

It is Dark.

"It is dark when the honest and honorable man sees the result of long years swept cruelly away by the grasp of knavish, heartless adversity. It is dark when he feels the clouds of sorrow gather around, and knows that the hopes and happiness of others are fading with his own. But in that hour the memory of past integrity will be a true consolation, and assure him, even here on earth, of glories of light in Heaven.

It is dark when the lost voice of that sweet child, once so fondly loved, is no more heard around in murmur. Dark, when the light pattering feet no more resound without the threshold, or ascend, step by step, the stairs. Dark when some well known melody recalls the strain once oft attained by the childish voice now hushed in death! Dark, indeed; but only the gloom which heralds the day-spring of immortality and the infinite light of Heaven!

It is dark, when in later life we tread the scene of long-vanished pleasures—pleasures pure and innocent, whose memory has often thrilled our soul—whose voices, like those of some phantom band, are ever sweet and yet but never another. When, chiming Ring as ye will, sweet voices, there are lofter joys awaiting in the golden Eden Land, which lies beyond the sunset of life, and is gladdened by the light above in Heaven!

It is dark, very dark, when the grim hand of sickness has passed fearfully over us with its deadly magnetic stroke, and left behind the life-enduring sorrows of blindness, decrepitude, or debility. It is dark, sadly dark, when we are neglected for the fair and comely who abound in this heartless world.—Cheer up, then poor sufferer; for there be those among the angels who love thee, and thou wilt shine, fair as they, when touched by the light above, in Heaven!

It is dark in the heart of man all over this fair green world. It is dark beneath the noontide sky—dark in the sun-ray, the noonbeam, the star light. But for the true heart and trusting soul, who lives in the life of love and gentleness, there beasmeth ever a light of joy from Heaven!"

How we abuse our Stomachs.

No other civilized people, probably, are accustomed to abuse their stomachs as we Americans of the United States. Our food is often badly chosen, still more frequently spoiled in cooking, and always eaten in utter disregard of dietetic rules. We eat far too much flesh meat, (especially pork in its most objectionable forms) and too little bread, vegetables and fruits. Our hot, soda-raised biscuits, hot griddle cakes, saturated with butter, and the hot, black, intolerable coffee, which form the staples of our breakfast, are, in the way in which they are taken, among the most deleterious articles ever put upon a table. Pies are another American abomination, and have no small share of ill-health to answer for. The mince-pie, as it is generally made, is the abomination of abominations. Some describe it as "very white and indigestible at the bottom, and untold horrors in the middle."

Even our bread is unwholesome. It is made of the finest of fine flour, and fermented till its natural sweetness and a large portion of its nutritive elements are destroyed, or raised with those poisonous chemicals, soda and cream of tartar. In either case it is unfit to be eaten. The rich cakes which our good housekeepers deem so indispensable, are still worse, and so on. Now add to our badly chosen dishes and our objectionable cookery, the rapid eating and imperfect mastication, and the continually interrupted digestion which our intense and feverish life necessitates, and we have a complication of abuses which would, one must believe, have long since utterly destroyed the vital stamina of any people not originally endowed with marvellous physical powers.

My Philosophy.

Bright things can never die,
Even though they fade;
Beauty and minstrelsy
Deathless were made;
What though the summer day Passes at eve away;
Dost not the moon's soft ray Silence the night?

Bright things can never die,
Said my philosophy;
Pleasure, though he pass by,
Leaves us the light.
Kind words can never die,
Cherished and blessed;
God knows how deep they lie Stored in the breast.

Like childhood's simple rhymes
Said o'er a thousand times,
Aye, in all years and climes, Distinct and near.
Kind words can never die,
Said my philosophy;
Deep in the soul they lie,
God knows how dear.

Childhood can never die,
Wrecks of the past
Flit on the memory
Even to the last.
Many a happy thing,
Many a daisied spring,
Flow on Time's ceaseless wing,
Far, far away.

Childhood can never die,
Said my philosophy;
Weeks of our infancy,
Live on for aye.
Sweet fancies never die,
They leave behind
Some fairy legacy
Stored in the mind.

Some happy thought or dream,
Pure as day's earliest beam,
Kissing the gentle dream,
In the long glaze.
Yet, though these things pass by,
Said my philosophy,
Bright things can never die,
Even though they fade.

The Heroes of Industry.
Let others write of those who fought
On many a bloody field,
Of those whose daring deeds were wrought
With sword and spear, and shield;
But I will write of heroes bold,
The bravest of the brave,
Who fought for neither fame nor gold,
Who fill an unmarked grave.

Heroes who conquered many a field
Of hard and steady toil,
Who made the sturdy forest yield
To their untiring will;
Heroes who did not stand aloof,
But dealt such fearful blows,
That even the fiercest of the foe
Now tremble in the face of God.

The heroes of the plough and loom,
The ax and the forge,
The delvers down among the gloom
Of ponderous rocks;
Heroes who built our lofty tower,
And forged its heavy beam,
Which faithfully protects the hoar,
And marks its flight so well.

Heroes who brought from every clime,
Rich trophies of wealth;
Heroes of thoughts and deeds sublime,
Who spurned what came by stealth;
Who won a quondam fair and bright,
And left no bloody stain;
No heath profaned, no deadly blight,
Upon God's wide domain.

These world-wide common workers crave
No laurel wreath of fame,
No monument above their grave;
They toiled but for a name
Among the lowly ones who plod
Their weary way along,
With faith and confidence that God
Correcteth every wrong.

A Tranquil Life.

Let him stand, whoever will,
On promotion's slippery sill;
Me, let quiet satisfy,
Sweeter for obscurity;
Finding every real pleasure
In a land of blessed leisure.

By the world of men unknown,
Let my life flow silent on;
So, when all its days are passed,
Each more tranquil than the last,
Let me fill an old man's grave,
No man's master, no man's slave!

Heaven on him doth lie
The burden of mortality,
Who, known to all the world beside,
Stranger to himself hath died.

Anecdotes.

Who don't you put on a clean shirt? said a swell to a companion, then the girls will smile on you as they do on me.

Every body can't afford to wear a clean shirt every day as you can, was the reply.

Why not? asked white collar.

Because every body's mother isn't a wash-woman.

A parishioner inquired of his pastor the meaning of this line of Scripture—He was clothed with curses as with a garment.

It signifies, replied the divine, that that individual had got a habit of swearing.

A country girl recently asked a city acquaintance to go with her to purchase some articles, and to act as spoken-woman.

They entered a shop and the city girl asked—Have you any hose?

I don't want hose, said the country maiden, I want stockings.

A Cincinnati editor being asked what is the news, replied:

Sir, I sell my news at ten cents a week; don't bother me.

I don't think, husband, you are very smart.

No, indeed, wife, but everybody knows I am awfully shrewd.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

A compound remedy, in which we have labored to produce the most effectual alternative that can be made. It is a concentrated extract of Para Sarsaparilla, so combined with other substances of still greater alternative power as to afford an effective antidote for the diseases Sarsaparilla is reputed to cure. It is believed that such a remedy is never before offered to suffer from Strumous complaints, and that one which will accomplish their cure must prove of immense service to this large class of our afflicted fellow-citizens. How completely this compound will do it has been proven by experiment on many of the worst cases to be found of the following complaints:—

SCROFULA AND SCROFULOUS COMPLAINTS, Eruptions and Eruptive Diseases, ULCERS, PIMPLES, BOILS, TUBERCLES, SALT HEAD, SCALD HEAD, SYPHILIS AND SYPHILITIC AFFECTIONS, MERCURIAL DISEASE, DYSPEPSIA, NEURALGIA OR THE DOLORICA, DEBRILITY, DYSPEPSIA AND INDIGESTION, ERYTHELMA, ROSE ON THE ANVIL, AND ALL THE AFFECTIONS OF THE SKIN OF COMPLAINTS ARISING FROM IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD.

This compound will be found a great promoter of health, when taken in the spring, to expel the four humors which festinate in the blood at that season of the year. By the timely expulsion of them many rankling disorders are nipped in the bud. Multitudes can, by the aid of this remedy, spare themselves from the endurance of such agonizing and unprofitable sores, through which the system will strive to rid itself of corruption, if not assisted to do this through the natural channels of the body by an alternative medicine. Cleanse out the vitiated blood when it is impure, and the skin, bursting through the skin in pimples, eruptions, or sores; cleanse it when you find it is obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it whenever it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Even when the system is so diseased as to feel, people enjoy better health, and live longer, for cleansing the blood. Keep the blood healthy, and all is well; but with this purgative of blood, there can be no lasting health. Sarsaparilla, however, must go wrong, and the great machinery of life is disordered or overturned.

Sarsaparilla has, and deserves much, the reputation of accomplishing these ends. But the world has been egregiously deceived by preparations of it, and many have been ruined by it, but more because many preparations, pretending to be concentrated extracts of it, contain but little of the virtue of Sarsaparilla, or any thing else.

During late years the public have been misled by large bottles, pretending to give a quart of Extract of Sarsaparilla for one dollar. Most of these have been frauds upon the sick, for they not only contain little, if any, Sarsaparilla, but often no curative properties whatever. Hence, bitter and painful disappointment has followed the use of the various extracts of Sarsaparilla which flood the market, until the name itself is justly despised, and has become synonymous with imposition and cheat. Still we call this compound Sarsaparilla, and intend to supply such a remedy as shall rescue the name from the load of calumny and discredit upon it. And we think we have ground for believing it has virtues which are irresistible by the ordinary run of the diseases it is intended to cure. In order to secure their complete eradication from the system, they must be judiciously taken according to directions on the bottle.

Investigate.

Why is it when a new science is discovered; when new projects are started; when new issues are presented to the people; when anything called new, anything wedded to progress, why is it, I ask, when these are presented to you for your consideration, do you, and most of your fellow-men, reject, condemn, and scorn such discoveries and ideas, without investigating the subject, as is your duty? Is it because you are afraid of the possibility of your becoming convinced of the truth? Or is it because you wish to harbor that old care-worn, poodle-dog, conservatism, and dare not allow that blessed worker, progress, to enter thy habitation, fearing it will get control of thee? It would seem after so many wonderful discoveries as have come to light during the past fifty years, that persons would cease to condemn new ideas, new projects, new discoveries, without giving them at least an investigation. But such is not the fact; anything new which comes up, is pronounced at once, a humbug, or deception. Is this right? Is it wise? Can you expect to acquire knowledge while lying dormant? Can you suppose these new developments will reach you unless you search for them? Be ye ever watchful. Search and ye shall find. Do not longer persist in your inconsistent course; be a true man; and in being such, you will be particularly careful and not condemn new theories—new discoveries, until you have examined and satisfied yourself as to the truth thereof. On the other hand, it is equally absurd for one to receive anything new as a truth, without having investigated it sufficiently.

Perhaps some one will say, I do not think this or that worth investigation; hence my reason for not meddling with it. Is not this the excuse invariably given when anything new comes to light? It makes no difference how important the discovery, or the value of information received; it is at once pronounced unworthy of notice, unworthy of belief, if it is something that cannot be immediately understood. Cultivate patience and perseverance. Do not too hastily in your conclusions. Time worketh wonders. Scorn and condemn though you may. But as well might you strive to smother the soul of one and give it to the beasts to devour as to endeavor to put down or destroy a truth. Truth will live; but an untruth must die. Do not persist then further in your inconsistent course. Do not longer refrain from doing this or that because your father, your grandfather, or your great grandfather, and so on, did not the same. Do not allow that would-be guide—popularity, to get control of thee, to that extent, whereby thou dare not search for, and acknowledge the truth. No, reader. Do your duty, and in doing thus, you will cease pronouncing anything new which comes to light, false, without having given it a most thorough investigation.

The Broken Cup.
TRANSLATED FROM THE FRENCH.
All the large cities of Europe possess some samples of the rich products of the rich manufactures of Sevres. One of the most precious of these specimens was to be found, some years ago, at Venice, in the palace of the Countess, Erminia D. This was a breakfast service of old Sevres, of a soft pale color, composed of eight pieces: a salver, a coffee-pot, a cream pitcher, a sugar-dish and two cups and saucers, adapted to what is called a breakfast à la-tete.

This breakfast service was a marvel of taste and elegance—a masterpiece, admirable at once for its elegance of shape, for its richness of ornament, and for the exquisite charm and incomparable merit of its paintings. Each piece bore the mark of its origin, the date of its fabrication and the signatures of its makers. The origin was indicated by two opposite S's interlaced, painted blue on the reverse of the pieces. A double J, placed between the two S's, indicated the date of 1797. Lastly, certain well-known signs proved that the most celebrated artists of the time had executed the divers paintings which contribute in ornamenting works of Ceramique, and which were all united in the specimen. The models of the pieces had been designed by Lagrenée; Larocche had painted the arabesque—Sioux the flowers; Castel the birds. The landscapes of the medallions were Evan's and the figures Asselin's and Pignon's.

The Countess Erminia had received this set of porcelain as a legacy from one of her uncles, who had bought it at Paris during the Revolution—proceeds of the pillages that took place at that disastrous epoch, of the houses of the upper classes. Among the artistic treasures which the fair Venetian possessed, this one was the object of her production.

The Countess was remarked as one of the most distinguished ladies of Venice. She was twenty-five or six years of age, perfectly beautiful, very rich, and of unblemished virtue. To these advantages she joined that of being free; and as she showed some disposition to unite herself again in the bonds of matrimony, numerous suitors disputed the preference.

When the competitors had all furnished proof of their amiable qualities, the Countess made her choice, officially elected Count Adriano R., as her future husband. She could not have chosen better, in order to make at once a marriage of inclination and of convenience. Between the Count and Countess there was parity of fortune as well as of title. Their personal advantages were equal. The Count Adriano R. was one of the handsomest and most amiable cavaliers of Venice.

The marriage was to take place in one month.

The Count came every day familiarly to see his betrothed, and passed with her the best part of his time. One of those long sittings, so full of charm, was disturbed by a painful accident.

Wishing to examine closely the delicate paintings of Sevres breakfast service, the Count had the ill luck to let one of the cups fall and break.

The Countess being present uttered a terrible scream, and fell insensible on the sofa. When she revived, it was only to yield to a fit of despair and passion.

The young man was dismayed at the effects of his awkwardness. Surely he should have been astonished to see the Countess so deeply affected by the loss of a material object, and it would have been quite natural at sight of her fury, to make some reflections upon the inconveniences of a temper so quickly aroused; but no, this accomplished lover was touched by one thing only—the pain caused to the woman he loved.

He tried to console and reassure her. The broken cup, it is true, left a deplorable blank in the porcelain salver, where little decorations in relief were arranged for each piece, so that the loss could not be concealed.

I will arrange that, said the Count; and I will find the match to the cup I destroyed, if I have to go and search for it myself at the manufactory of Sevres!

That is the best thing you can do, dryly answered the Countess. Go, then, right away.

I have a better project to propose. We shall go together. We will make a voyage to Paris immediately after our marriage.

Don't talk to me of marriage! cried the Countess, whose irritation was at its height; I will not marry you until you shall have brought me my cup!

ago, by a rich amateur, for a thousand crowns.

Do you think he would be willing to part with it, if he were paid double, triple, or anything he would ask? inquired the Count.

Amateurs, like him of whom I speak, never, at any price, part with a precious acquisition. But this one is dead. The sale of his effects took place five years ago, and the object of your desire, I recollect perfectly well, was bought by an Englishman for six thousand francs.

The name of the Englishman?
I do not know.

If you can ascertain it and will let me know, there are twenty louis for you.

The dealer took care not to say that it was very easy. He hunted up the auctioneer who had conducted the sale in question, and the next morning he announced to the Count that the name of the purchaser was Lord Herbert W.

The Count instantly set out for London, and waited on Lord Herbert, who lived on one of the handsomest residences of Portland Place.

My lord, said he, I am informed that you possess a very curious collection of old china.

You have been misinformed, monsieur, answered the lord.

But you bought some years ago, at Paris, a very remarkable breakfast service of old Sevres?

Ah! yes—a whim.

If you do not attach a great deal of value to them, you will oblige me very much by ceding them to me.

I have not got them now, monsieur. I gave them away.

Would it be imprudent to ask, to whom?

Perhaps, said Lord Herbert, smiling.

I assure you, my lord, it is not a frivolous curiosity that leads me to address you that question. A very serious motive causes me to attach the greatest interest to the acquisition of these porcelain sets; and if I desire to know the person to whom you gave them, it is in the hope that that person will consent to part with them.

Very good, sir, I own that I gave them to a dainesse of the Opera of Paris, Mademoiselle X.

Thank you, my lord; I shall return to Paris.

Permit me to say that you will not find Mlle X there. She is on leave; and here is a journal in which you will see that she is now obtaining brilliant successes at the theatre of Vienna.

Then it is to Vienna I must proceed—Adieu! And if you ever come to Venice dispose of me.

The Count was off. He had resolutely made up his mind not to halt in his search for the precious cup, and he was determined to make the tour of Europe, if necessary.

So he landed at Vienna. He imagined he had at length reached his goal. He was here told—

You come too late. Mlle X has terminated her representations here, and she left for Madrid three days ago, where she is called by new engagements.

The Count set out for Spain without a murmur.

Having arrived at Madrid, he called on the dainesse, who gave him the most smiling reception, without asking the cause of his visit, which she thought she could guess.

After a brief compliment, he drew from his pocket the box containing the cup. The dainesse contemplated the box with glowing eyes, persuaded that it was a casket containing some jewel of price which the Count was going to offer her.

But surprise and disappointment succeeded to this hope when she saw a simple set of porcelain appear, and when the Count said—

You have a breakfast service of old Sevres similar to this cup?

No, monsieur, answered Mlle X.

If you have not, you have had it.

It is very possible, but I do not remember it any more. So many of these trifles pass through our hands!

That one was given you by Lord Herbert W.

four or five years ago. How do you think one can have such a long memory?

But, by recalling to your mind, may be—Stop now—yes, I have it! His name was Anatole.

Anatole who? That is a Christian name, certainly, but it is the family name I wish to know.

You ask too much. I did not call him anything but Anatole. All I know besides is, that he was from Bordeaux. But now I think of it, I found here an attache of the embassy who knew him. We may be able to learn through him this family name you are so anxious about.

Accordingly, the next morning Count Adriano left Madrid, after having learned that the man who had traded with Mlle X was called Monsieur de L. The attache of the embassy had lost sight of him for a long time, and could give no information concerning him. But it was enough to know his name and the city where he had dwelt. The Count armed with this information proceeded to Bordeaux.

At Madrid he had taken a letter of credit upon one of the principal commercial houses of Bordeaux, and there he made inquiries concerning Monsieur Anatole de L.

He is dead, answered the banker.

How long?

Two years.

And doubtless, a sale was made of his personal effects?

No; everything was retained by his widow.

Ah! he was married?

Yes; he died after six years of marriage.

And his widow?

Is living at Bordeaux with her mother.—They are very rich, and I am their banker.

Would you give me a word of recommendation to be admitted at the house of those ladies?

Willingly.

The Count was received by Madame de L. He found her charming, and was astonished that the husband of such a beautiful woman could have had any relations with Mlle X.

Madame, said he, I beg you will excuse the indiscretion and impertinence that my visit may have. I dare hope you will pardon me when you know its motive. I hope still further—know that the happiness of my life depends upon you!

How, Monsieur! replied Madame de L., much surprised at his speech, which she might have taken for a sentimental declaration.

And she cast a glance almost ireful upon the handsome Venetian.

Do not mistake the meaning of my words, madame, he continued. Far from me any thought of disrespect towards you! The happiness of which I speak is far from here. I see you to-day for the first time, and the object of my visit has nothing in it which could give you offence. It is merely in reference to an acquisition.

Explain yourself, monsieur, said Madame de L., who eyes became softer.

Do you not possess, madame, some pieces of old Sevres porcelain?

Yes, monsieur. Yes; my husband—the husband for whom I weep, and for whom I shall weep eternally, (Madame de L. emphasized the last word)—having made a voyage to Paris, one year before his death, brought me these porcelain—a breakfast service which had belonged to the Princess de Lamballe.

Precisely; and a match to this, is it not? said the Count Adriano, exhibiting his cup.

Ah, monsieur, how good you are, and what pleasure you give me! I understand; and instead of being angry I shall thank you.—You have learned the misfortune that befell me, and you have come to bring me that cup. Tell me how much it cost you. I shall never be able to pay you too much for it!

What do you mean, madame?

Look here! replied the Countess, opening a rosewood case. Look at that breakfast service, to which a cup is wanting, which I had the misfortune to break.

What! you have no odd one also?

Will it be no longer so, thanks to you?

But, madame, you are mistaken. I do not wish to part with my cup. On the contrary, I come to ask you to cede me your porcelain.

Never! monsieur, never!

It was the fidelity of Madame de L. for that first visit. But the Count asked permission to return, and it was granted.

He hoped to find Madame de L. more tractable, and the young widow had the same hope. Each expected to obtain the contested cup, and the visits multiplied.

Reflect, madame, said the Count, that my marriage is at stake in this affair. The Countess Erminia, whom I love, will not marry me unless I bring back that cup.

Reflect, monsieur, replied Madame de L., that it is a present from the husband that I loved so dearly! To part with it would be a wrong done to his memory.

To move the lady the Count told her of the long and tedious voyages he had made in search of the cup, which had so often changed owners. In this story he unveiled the episode of Madrid—the history of that dainesse who knew Monsieur de L. only by name of Anatole, and who had received of him two cashmere robes before exchanging her porcelain for a third one.

This revelation shook deeply the regrets of the beautiful widow, and she ceased to proclaim eternal fidelity.

How can you have so much regard for the memory of that faithless husband? said the Count. How can you set such value on an object acquired in a manner so injurious to you?

And you, answered Madame de L., how can you persist so passionately in your desire to marry a woman who makes your marriage depend upon finding a cup?

it, and here is its condition. There it was, torn and worn out. All we can say to our patrons, is, don't lend your paper; when people come borrowing, give our respects to them and say that we will supply them at the office. But don't lend your paper.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, March 24th, 1860.

"DON'T, NO MASTER, OF NO SICK ARE WE."

Death of Daniel P. Nye, Esq.

This gentleman, who was so seriously injured on the 11th inst., by being thrown from his horse, died at his residence, in this town, on the morning of the 19th instant, after eight days of great suffering, in the thirty-eighth year of his age. Mr. N. had within a few years become a citizen of this place, and during the brief period had won the respect and esteem of all whose acquaintance he had formed.

He was courteous and social in all the walks of life, carrying with him the sunshine of a bright, cheerful, friendly countenance and spirit. Let it be the high ambition of relatives and friends to follow on to greet him again.

"Where faced his friend,
And kindred spirits meet to part no more."

Funeral services were performed at his late residence and at the Unitarian Church, on Wednesday last, Rev. Dr. Putnam, of Roxbury, officiating.

The following Resolutions speak in truthful language the virtues and character of the deceased:

At a meeting of the Directors of the Mount Wollaston Bank, held at the Bank Rooms, March 23rd, the following Resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, An overruling Providence, whose mysterious power and action it is not deemed that mortal should comprehend, has removed from us by death our esteemed associate at this Board, Daniel Phillips Nye.

Resolved, That in his loss we have been deprived of one, whom, in all the relations of life, in which with him we have been united, we have ever found a kind companion, a generous friend, a wise counsellor, and an upright man.

Resolved, That in his just consideration for the rights of others, his kindly bearing and his unvarying probity, we recognize the true power which properly extends his business affairs, and why, also, he won from his neighbors and his associates—their admiration, their friendship, and their esteem.

Resolved, That we tender to his afflicted family and relatives, our deep and heartfelt sympathy at their irreparable bereavement; but while no words of ours can bring down consolation to their distress, yet we would have them take to their hearts this soothing balm: That though he was cut down in the flower of his manhood, and all that in him was mortal has been closed from their eyes forever, yet his memory will remain an enduring monument of purity, integrity, and truth.

The EQUINOXIAL brought with it quite an interesting little snow storm; expressly, it would seem, for our entertainment. For it commenced in the Northeast; then it moved to the North, Northwest, West, Southwest, South, and in fact boxed every point in the compass; driving the angry clouds round and round in circles, which alternately discharged their fleecy particles, furnishing a warm covering for the naked earth, to the depth of several inches. It disappeared to a fog, and we have now a beautiful spring day.

For the Patriot.
The New Bell.

MR. EDITOR: I wish to bring before the notice of our Municipal Fathers, a few facts in relation to the selection and purchase of the New Bell, which they were empowered to do, by an act of the town at their late Annual Meeting. We learn, from good authority, that a bell, of excellent make and tone, but of quite a different material from those which we have been accustomed to, has been recommended to their consideration, simply, because the cost figures three or four cents a pound less than one of a composition cast. In a pecuniary point of view, kind Sirs, it is expected that you will look well to the interests of the town; but not on the penny wise and pound foolish principle.

CASE STEEL BELLS, where ever they have been used, have proved a failure; never realizing expectation. They are subject to great changes. Nothing can protect them from the corroding influence of our damp and humid atmosphere. It is the nature of steel, and iron in any form, rapidly to oxidize. This is no new theory. A bell, therefore, made of this metal, would soon lose in substance—sensibly effecting its tone. In the exposed situation where this one is to be placed, in such a case, it would be but a few years before it would have to be replaced by a new one.

What we desire in these remarks, is simply, to have carried out, what we believe to be the wishes of our citizens. They voted to have a bell of 3000 pounds; made of a durable material; common bell-metal. There are a plenty of such to be had. The subject is one of considerable importance; especially to those who take a pride in developing the resources of their native place. But we have an abiding confidence in your judgment, which leaves no doubt, that their fondest anticipations will be realized.

MACMINSTER.

For the Patriot. High School Exhibition.

The exhibition at the Town Hall, on Wednesday evening last, was a decided success. Seldom is an exhibition of the kind so perfectly complete in every part.

The teacher very modestly addressed the large audience—about six hundred—at the commencement of the exercises, requesting silence and their indulgence.

Next came a Song "from sweet voices" accompanied by the music of the piano, played by the accomplished assistant, Miss N. M. Daw. The songs alone were amply sufficient to entertain an audience.

The first speaker, J. Edward Spear, made appropriate and graceful gestures, spoke fluently, and in this, as well as in his other pieces, acted his part well, and left the impression on his hearers that he had been a faithful pupil of a faithful teacher.

The Reading by Misses Abercrombie, Savil, Cummings and Flint, was of a high order. George Randall in Belshazzar's Feast was well received, but in the Court Scene from the "Merchant of Venice," as Portia, he performed the part so well, as to defy criticism.

Woman's Rights are very indefinite things; yet a person who heard the discussion might gain some tolerably clear ideas of what they are supposed to be. Miss Morton was a perfect "old maid," and Misses Hight and Flint suitable companions, we mean in the play, of course.

Thompson Baxter, in the extract from the Pickwick papers, forcibly reminded us of a real Country Lawyer, and in the appeal for the Widow Bardsell, enlisted our entire sympathies in behalf of all widows who were anxious to "take boarders."

Miss Bryant and Miss Morton were applauded in their Recitations.

H. C. Rogers took a prominent part in two of the most difficult pieces and was well received, as also in the "Last days of Herclanum." He is one of the ornaments of the school.

Miss Richardson, as "Aunt Quinby," was perfectly at home, and was the most natural performer on "the boards."

Miss E. A. Pope and Miss Harding should not be passed by without notice. Their parts were well done.

James G. Shannon gave Parrish and his Captive with excellent effect; and there was not a failure on the part of any one of the pupils.

School exhibitions may be carried too far, and they doubtless have been in some cases, but they are very beneficial, and produce the best results.

Now, when our High School is taught in the way a school should be taught, with a teacher who is loved by pupils, and honored by parents, will not the grammar teachers, and others interested, send a large number of pupils to it this Spring? We think they ought.

Our public schools, with all their faults, are the places where we may best learn, and do learn, to be useful, law-abiding citizens.

The people of Quincy do much for their schools. They sustain and support their teachers well, and have a right to expect much from them. Public sentiment in the town is such, that any man who habitually finds fault with schools and teachers, is looked upon with extreme suspicion, if not despised.

For the Patriot.

A Word to our Young Ladies.

MR. EDITOR: How many of our young people, we see, who thoughtlessly, throw away health, by being slaves to fashion, and the folly of appearing in raiment unsuited to the season.

In a climate like ours—subject to every vicissitude of change—too much care cannot be taken. Notwithstanding these warnings, still, how many there are who pass them by unheeded. Who pay no regard, or bestow a single thought, on that gem of all price—HEALTH.

In the more advanced stages of the season—at mid summer, even, we often have weather which is trying to the system; a warm morning, and cold, damp evenings. But at this time of the year, in particular, before winter has fairly left us, and the feelings are alive to the first promptings of spring, extra caution is necessary. Be not in a hurry, therefore, to cast aside your winter garments, for some more fashionable and gaudy fabric, or appear in the streets in your parlor slippers. Such gross imprudence is a fatal error.

When we look around, it is no matter of astonishment to us, that so many of our fair daughters fall so early victims to that fell destroyer—CONSUMPTION; or that our chambers of sickness are crowded with invalids. It might be otherwise. "An ounce of prevention, is worth a pound of cure," in such matters. "Try it. Never appear abroad unless your feet are well protected by thick, substantial shoes—impervious to the damp vapors with which the earth is now charged; or in suitable dress, otherwise, to retain the natural warmth of the body, and guard it against sudden changes. Follow these rules, and your reward will be health, happiness, and a cheerful old age."

Boston, March 22 1860.

Exciting news from Mexico—A Novel Bottle. Proceedings of Congress—Bribery in the State House—The Bible Question in the Boston Schools—Dull Times—Amusements.—The Boston Theatre.

The war news from Mexico and our squadron in the Gulf, has produced much feeling, particularly at Washington. Miramon's troops said to number eight thousand men, well supplied with artillery and military stores, were on the threshold of Vera Cruz, in fact, surrounding the city. The Liberals (so called) in the Garrison of the city, numbered between three and four thousand, with the famous Apudita as chief of the Artillery. The Castle has been attacked, but without success. Thus we see, there is a fierce civil war raging in Mexico. But the most important intelligence, is the capture of two Mexican War Steamers, Miramon and Marquez, as prizes to the American Squadron. It will be well to remember that these vessels recently left Havana for Mexico, to aid the cause of the Church party; and report says, they were fitted out by Santa Anna for that purpose. Now these vessels had a fight off Anton Lizardo, with the United States Steamers; the Mexicans were taken of course, and sent to New Orleans as prizes.

No wonder there is such commotion at Vera Cruz. The residents there are highly indignant, and the Ex-Quator of the American Consul at Vera Cruz has been revoked. As yet, we have no correct version of the naval battle. It is reported the Mexican loss is fifteen killed and thirty wounded, three Americans wounded. It is impossible to tell what will be the consequences of this conflict with Mexico. Reports from Washington say, the Mexican Steamers were captured as pirates, and that the act on the part of our Naval force is fully sustained. Indignation is vented against the Spanish authorities in Cuba for fitting out this expedition against the Constitutional Government of Mexico, which we now recognize. There is suspicion that the captured Steamers were fitted out by authority of Spain and sustained by France. Serious results may grow out of this difficulty. Aside from the Mexican news, matters at Washington are quiet. The Senate has passed a Bill this week, fixing the postage on "Drop Letters" at one cent instead of two, and authorizing publishers to print on their papers, the date when subscriptions expire. A Resolution having reference to the reception of the Japan Embassy was adopted. They will make quite a sensation in their travels through our country. In the House, a Bill, authorizing a loan of $20,000,000 for the redemption of Treasury Notes and increasing its duties on imports and the Light House, Executive and Judicial Appropriation Bills are reported. The wheels of Legislation are in active motion. In the mean time, the Presidential question is not over looked. Extensive preparations are making for the Charleston Convention. Efforts undoubtedly will be used to bring forward a candidate from the Southern States; and Jefferson Davis has been named. The chance of Judge Douglas is the best, and his strongest competitor in the Convention evidently will be Vice President Breckinridge. The Northwestern and West States, are bound to have the nomination.

The charges of bribery at the State House, are exciting no little interest here, implicating the Metropolitan Horse Railroad Company. As the matter is under investigation we forbear any comments at present.

The Bible question in the public schools of Boston has been discussed by the School Committee this week. And it may be said, to be comprised by abrogating the portion of the rule which required the pupils to learn the Ten Commandments. The question was disposed of by a decided majority of thirty eight to twenty, bringing the School Regulations with regard to devotional exercises, where they always should have been, in conformity to the Statutes of the Commonwealth.

Business continues very inactive here with no very cheering prospects. The Lecture season is about over, and many of our places of public amusement, in consequence of dull times, do not meet with a liberal patronage. There are no efforts left undone, by the Boston Academy of Music, the Boston Museum, and the Howard Athenaeum, to cater richly to the public taste; but money is scarce. Cook's Royal Amphitheatre at the Boston Theatre, is a splendid attraction, and to lovers of such amusements, is well worth attending.

Removed. The Telegraphic Office has been removed from the Insurance Office to the Jewelry shop of John O. Holden, on Hancock street, where those who wish to send messages to any part of the United States or British Provinces, can be accommodated.

KEEP IT BEFORE THE PEOPLE. Redding's Russia Salve is an infallible remedy for all kinds of wounds, cuts, burns, scalds, etc, and also cures corns, bunions, chilblains, and like afflictions. For sale everywhere at only 25 cents a box.

For the Patriot.

Quincy:

A birds eye view of its mineral wealth: its business facilities—and the proposed Gas Company.

MR. EDITOR—Sir: Your paper appears to be the only reliable medium through which to express a thought with confidence, and place before its numerous recipients, actual facts. I ask of your indulgence the privilege of calling public attention to a few business facts in relation to our town.

Quincy, it is pretty generally admitted, stands pre eminent in the County, if not in the State, in regard to the productiveness of her Granite mines. Its excellence for building purposes, is without a rival. Who ever doubts this, let them visit Franklin Street, in Boston. It is from the resources of her mines, that those stately edifices have been raised. Sear's Block, is a standing monument to her fame. Quincy stone, is of the finest texture, admits of the highest polish, takes readily the impressions of the artist, and for durability, challenges the cankering tooth of time. As has been intimated before, if our communication with the city was more easy and direct, we could defy competition in this line of business.

The next branch of business in order, is the Boot and Shoe business; which has until lately been carried on pretty extensively, giving employment to hundreds of operatives. The best of work is turned out at these manufactories, which find ready sales at the South and West; the house of Adam Curtis & Co., have also a large trade in California.

The ship-building interest, also, claims a passing notice. There are several vessels already under way; and we learn, that as soon as spring fairly opens, the keels of others are to be laid, which will restore to the Point its usual activity and enterprise.

With the return of better times—which is now anxiously looked for—and the introduction of Gas—which appears to be a foregone conclusion—this favored town will, we have every assurance, again be put on the high road to prosperity, by the indomitable energy of her citizens, which nothing can arrest except a brush from the tail of Hallett's comet, or a dismemberment of the Union.

HANCOCK.

OUR DANCING ASSEMBLIES. The fourth lesson in Professor Walker's course, will be given to-day. We were pleased to learn the prosperous condition of this school.—During the week, we have been repeatedly importuned, by a promising danceuse, for our opinion in regard to the weather on the next assembly day—whether we thought it would be favorable for an attendance or not? We gave every encouragement—gratified at the evidence of early interest with which the teacher has already inspired his pupils.

Braintree Sons of Temperance.

BRAINTREE, MARCH 21ST, 1860.

MR. EDITOR: The following "Resolution" was presented at a recent meeting of the "Monistiquet Division Sons of Temperance, of Braintree," and adopted by the unanimous vote of the members as a grateful acknowledgment of the generous kindness of the "Quincy Brass Band," in furnishing music, "at the Festival and Fair," held in the Town House some weeks since. You will do us a favor by inserting this Resolution in the columns of your valuable paper.

Resolved, "That the thanks of this 'Division' are eminently due to the 'Quincy Brass Band,' for the excellent Music furnished by them, which in no small degree, added to the pleasure of the entertainment of the 'Festival and Fair.'"

What do the physicians say of M' Lane's Vermifuge, prepared by Fleming Bros.?

Listen to the testimony of an eminent physician in favor of M' Lane's Vermifuge, which is now universally acknowledged to be the best in use; even members of the medical faculty (who are so often opposed to the use of patent medicines,) cannot withhold the approval of this invaluable remedy:

LIND, Stark Co., Ohio, Jan. 8, 1849.
I have used Dr. M' Lane's Worm Specific, prepared by Fleming Bros., Pittsburgh, Pa., in my private practice, and am prepared to say that the unparalleled success with which I have prescribed its use, both for children and adults, induces me to say the most in its favor of any specific or patent medicine ever before brought to my notice. The mode of administration, its efficacious effects, give it, in my opinion, a decided advantage over any other medicine of the kind before the public.

Purchasers will be careful to ask for Dr. M' Lane's celebrated Vermifuge, manufactured by Fleming Bros. of Pittsburgh, Pa. All other Vermifuges in comparison are worthless. Dr. M' Lane's genuine Vermifuge, also his celebrated Liver Pills, can now be had at all respectable drug stores. None genuine without the signature of Fleming Bros.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

A compound remedy, in which we have labored to produce the most effectual alternative that can be made. It is a concentrated extract of Para Sarsaparilla, so combined with other substances of still greater alternative power as to afford an effective antidote for the diseases Sarsaparilla is reputed to cure. It is believed that such a remedy is wanted by those who suffer from Strumous complaints, and that one which will accomplish their cure must prove of immense service to this large class of our afflicted fellow-citizens. How completely this compound will do it has been proven by experiment on many of the worst cases to be found of the following complaints:—
SCROFULA AND SCROFULOUS COMPLAINTS, Eruptions and ERECTIVE DISEASES, ULCERS, PIMPLES, BOILS, TUMORS, SALT RHEUM, SCALD HEAD, SWELLINGS AND SPREADING AGENS, MERCURIAL DISEASE, DROPSY, NEURALGIA OR TIC DOULOUREUX, DEBRILITY, DYSPEPSIA AND INDIGESTION, ERYSIPELAS, ROSE OR ST. ANTHONY'S FIRE, and indeed the whole class of complaints arising from IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD.

This compound will be found a great promoter of health, when taken in the spring, to expel the foul humors which fester in the blood at that season of the year. By the timely exhibition of this medicine, the various disorders are nipped in the bud. Multitudes can, by the aid of this remedy, spare themselves from the endurance of foul eruptions and ulcerous sores, through which the system is so severely and so long protracted. It not only assists to do this through the natural channels of the body by an alternative medicine. Cleanse out the vitiated blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in pimples, eruptions, or sores; cleanse it when you find it is obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it whenever it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Even where no particular disorder is felt, people enjoy better health, and live longer, for cleansing the blood. Keep the blood healthy, and all is well; but with this purgative of life disordered, there can be no lasting health. Scurvy or later, something must go wrong, and the great machinery of life is disordered or overthrown.

Sarsaparilla has, and deserves much, the reputation of accomplishing these ends. But the world has been everlastingly deceived by preparations of it, partly because the drug alone has not all the virtue that is claimed for it, but more because many preparations, pretending to be concentrated extracts of Sarsaparilla, contain but little of the virtue of Sarsaparilla, or any thing else.

During late years the public have been misled by large bottles, pretending to give a quart of Extract of Sarsaparilla for one dollar. Most of these have been frauds upon the sick, for they not only contain little, if any, Sarsaparilla, but often no curative properties whatever. Hence, bitter and painful disappointment has followed the use of many of these extracts of Sarsaparilla which flood the market, until the name itself is justly despised, and has become synonymous with imposition and cheat. Still we call this compound Sarsaparilla, and intend to supply such a remedy as shall rescue the name from the load of obloquy which rests upon it. And we think we have ground for believing it has virtues which are irresistible to the ordinary run of the diseases it is intended to cure. In order to secure their complete eradication from the system, the remedy should be judiciously taken according to directions on the bottle.

DR. J. C. AYER & CO.
LOWELL, MASS.

Haunted House.

Come, grandfather, give us another story this evening, said my cousin as we were seated around a good fire at our grandfather's one cold blustering night in the month of January, in the year of our Lord, Eighteen Hundred and Twenty-Seven.

My cousin and myself had been at our grandfather's, on a visit for about a week, and had kept the old gentleman telling stories most of the time; and by the way, he was good at it, and liked to tell as well as we did to hear him.

Come, said I, tell us a good one, and I will write it down as you tell it.

Well, said the old man, what will you have? Something about myself?

O yes, to be sure, we both said, and let it be a good long one too.

Well, wait till your grandmother sits down, and then I'll begin. So saying, he lit his pipe and puffed away, while I got my writing materials, ready to commence.

In a few minutes, grandmother took her knitting work and sat down, the old gentleman then commenced, and I will now give it to my readers.

When I was a young man, before I enlisted into the United States service, I was employed to teach a school in a pleasant village on the banks of the Connecticut river. While there, I often admired a beautiful and romantic situation in the vicinity of the village; it was situated about a half a mile from the highway, at the extremity of a lane that led to the house. The house itself was built after the Gothic style of architecture, and surrounded by a large heavy wall of stone, which enclosed about half an acre of ground. The only way of admittance was through a gate-way at the extremity of the enclosure, which might be closed, or left open, as the occupant of the mansion saw fit.

I inquired of the people with whom I boarded, respecting this house, who lived there, &c? I was informed that his name was Wentworth, generally called Colonel Wentworth; but the Colonel himself was scarcely ever seen out, and they say that this house is haunted by the devil, or something else.

This was all the information I could gather respecting him, and not having much faith in my informant's opinion, I determined to visit the Colonel myself. Accordingly, one Saturday afternoon, I took a walk to his grounds, and having knocked at the door, was admitted by the Colonel himself. He was a tall and muscular man, about the age of forty-five or perhaps a few years older, with a keen and penetrating eye; his hair, which was silvered over with age, was neatly combed and powdered after the old fashioned style. I, after making myself known to the Colonel, was introduced by him to his daughter, who was truly a beautiful girl, about the age of eighteen. After discussing the various topics of the day, the conversation turned upon the likelihood of a war with England; upon this subject, he appeared to be deeply interested, and as I thought, was rather in favor of the mother country, but he was so guarded in his remarks, that I could not tell which side he would espouse in the event of a war breaking out between the two countries.

As it was growing late, I bid the Colonel and his lovely daughter good night, and departed to the village.

The image of the lovely Isabella (for such was her name) dwelt upon my imagination for days and weeks, until I again repaired to the Colonel's house, upon an evening's visit. I found Isabella alone; she informed me that her father was absent on business.

We were soon engaged in a familiar conversation. I found the beauties of her mind were of as sparkling an order as those of her person. In short, I spent a delightful evening, and was more and more enamored of the beautiful Isabella. If I was in love before, how much more so I was now.

I repeatedly visited there during the winter, but seldom saw the Colonel, and when I did, he appeared to be busy about something that required all his time. In short, as the people of the village had informed me, there was something about him that appeared rather mysterious. I paid but little attention to his affairs, however, as those of his daughter occupied my mind. We frequently met, and I was deeply in love with her; things went on in this style, until one night, as I was at the Colonel's, a storm arose which rendered my return to the village that night rather difficult. I was asked to stay until morning, by both the Colonel and Isabella, to which I finally consented.

I was lighted to a room for the night, which was elegantly furnished, and left to my repose. After admiring the paintings (with which the room was hung) for a few minutes, I repaired to bed, and was soon locked in the arms of sleep.

I was suddenly awakened about midnight by the groans of some person in distress. I started up in bed, and after getting fairly awake, and hearing no more of the noise, I concluded that I had been terrified by a dream, and was about to compose myself to sleep, when the door of my room was suddenly opened and disclosed to my sight, a ghastly figure, clothed in a flowing garment, besmeared with blood. I endeavored to speak, but my tongue refused its office, my blood froze in my veins, and I thought my hour was at hand, when the figure advanced to the bedside, and repeated in a hollow voice, three times, "Beware, beware, beware," and vanished. Suddenly the bed under me shook, and the building itself seemed to tremble to its foundation, a cold sweat stood upon my face, and my limbs were weak with fear.

The vision once gone, my courage again returned, I got out of bed and searched the room in every direction; was this a supernatural being? Or was it a freak of my fancy? The last I could not believe, and was forced to believe the former. Sleep did not again visit my eyelids that night, and thankful was I when daylight appeared in the Eastern horizon. I arose in the morning and departed for the village with the determination never again to enter that house, nor did I disclose to any one the adventures of that night, but kept the secret locked within my own breast.

The next year, Independence was declared by the Continental Congress; and I, with others, enlisted to fight for my country. Time passed away for a space of three or four years, and I heard nothing of the Colonel or Isabella, until one day I was called by the commanding officer, who told me that he had information that a party of Tories were to collect that night, at a house which he described to me as well as he could. I immediately knew by his description, that the house was the former residence of Colonel Wentworth, and after marching through byways and private places, so that we could not be seen arrived within sight of the Colonel's house about sundown. Here we halted till dark, and then silently marched down upon them; we found the gate to the yard shut and fastened; after trying to open it, my lieutenant said, "We'd break the thing down if you say it."

Well, said I, my men, we have no time to lose, there is no getting in or out except through this gate, so be quick, take this log for a battering ram, and we'll try the old gate. No sooner said than done, fifteen or twenty men seized the log, and at it they went like good fellows.

That's it, bang away; two or three more such, and she'll be down; the men worked well, and in a few minutes the gate was prostrate.

I stationed a few men at the gate, and proceeded with the rest to the house, when we came to the door, I in a loud voice demanded admittance.

Who are you? and what do you want? was returned by some one in the house.

We are a party of Continental soldiers, and demand your immediate surrender; you are surrounded, and resistance will be useless.

We will surrender ourselves as prisoners of war, upon condition that the house and furniture shall remain unharmed.

These arrangements were agreed to; the door was unbarred, and I marched in, followed by my soldiers; here we found twenty men with Colonel Wentworth at their head, dressed in complete British uniform.

To whom have I the honor of addressing myself, said the Colonel.

To Captain M—, of the 21st regiment of Infantry, said I.

The Colonel looked at me closely for a few minutes, and then whispered to himself, (though loud enough for me to hear) it is you I thought I had scared you once, so that you would not be caught here again.

Ah! it is you that frightened me so three or four years since?

I don't wish to hold conversation with a rebel, said the Colonel.

As you please said I, but recollect that you are in my power, and must do as I say now.

I asked the Colonel where his daughter was, but he would give me no information; we soon formed ourselves into marching order, and were about to start for the camp with our prisoners, when the door opened and Isabella in the midst of us. My father, said she, what are they going to do with you? I will go with you, let it be where it will.

Daughter, said the stern old man, I am taken prisoner by the rebels; compose yourself, I shall not be hurt. I will go with you, said she, do not leave me here alone.

I stepped forward and made myself known to Isabella, and apologized to her for the necessity of taking her father to the camp, and told her that it was the wish of herself and father, she could accompany him to our head quarters. We accordingly harnessed one of the Colonel's horses—and he and his daughter were permitted to ride to camp; we reached head quarters about noon the next day, and were received by the commanding officer with pleasure. I went with Isabella to a friend's house, and procured accommodations for her while she might stay with us. I was with her almost every day, and my smothered love again revived; one day I declared my sentiments to her, and now dearest Isabella, said I, will you unite your destiny with mine? She told me that I must procure her father's consent; I accordingly waited upon the old man, and asked his consent to our union.

My daughter will never marry a rebel with my consent, said the Colonel. In a few days after this, the Colonel and his comrades were exchanged with the British, and he and his daughter departed for New York. When we parted it was with the understanding that if ever circumstances were favorable, we would yet be united.

The next time I saw Isabella, was when the British left New York. I stood upon the wharf and saw boat load after boat load of the British soldiers depart for the ships. There was a boat started from the wharf with a female seated in it, she raised her head, I caught her eye, it was Isabella. She, with her father, were about to embark for England; this was all my hopes blasted. I bowed and waved my hand to her; she rose up in the boat, raised her hand, faintly, and fell over the side of the boat into the water. Instantly every one rushed to that side of the boat, which turned over and precipitated all into the busy flood; some struck out for the shore, others clung to the boat. Isabella's dress buoyed her up; I waited not to consider—but flung off my coat and jumped into the water; in a few minutes I had her firmly to the shore. Isabella was insensible; I carried her into the house. She soon opened her eyes and enquired for her father. I left the room and proceeded to search for the Colonel; he was DEAD. His lifeless body was soon recovered, and I carried the dreadful news to Isabella. For a number of days I thought the shock would be too much for her tender frame, but she finally recovered and in a few months we were married. Isabella makes you a good grandmother, don't she boys?

Why Grandmother, was you the one? Yes, said the old lady, (while she wiped away a tear that sparkled in her eye) I was Isabella, and truly your grandfather has told the story.

A Drop of Ink.

Think of a Queen's first signature of a death warrant, where tears tried to blanch the fatal blackness of the dooming ink; of a traitor's adhesion to a deed of rebellion, written in gall; of a forger's trembling imitation of another's writing, where each letter took the shape of the gallows; of a lover's passionate proposal written in fire; of a proud girl's refusal written in ice; of a mother's dying expostulation with a wayward son written in her heart's blood; of an indignant father's disinheriting curse on his first born, black with the last color of the gray hairs which shall go down in sorrow to the grave; think of these and of all the other impassionate writings to which every hour gives birth, and what a strangely potent, Protean thing, a drop of ink grows to be! All over the world it is stilling at the behest of men. Here a despairing prisoner is writing with a rusty nail his dying confession of faith on his damp dungeon wall. There an anxious lover is deceiving all but his bride, with an ink which only she knows how to render visible. Beleaguered soldiers in Indian forts confiding to the perilous secrecy of rice water or innocent milk, their own lives and the fortunes of their country. Shipwrecked sailors, about to be engulfed in mid ocean, are consigning to a floating bottle the faint pencil memorandum of the spot where they will swiftly go down into the jaws of death. Everywhere happy pairs, dear husbands and wives, affectionate brothers and sisters, and all the busy world, are writing to each other on endless topics, with whatever paper comes to hand, whatever pen, whatever ink! The varied stream thus forever flowing, is the intellectual and emotional blood of the world, and no one need visit Egypt, or summon an Eastern magician, to show him all the acts, all the joys and woes of men reflected from the mirror of a drop of ink.—Macmillan's Magazine.

A Word to Fathers.

You do not wish your sons to acquire bad habits or keep bad company. They must have habits of some sort and company of some sort. It depends very much upon you what the character of their company and the nature of their habits shall be.

Set a good example. If you "take a little whiskey, brandy, rum, gin or cider," says a writer in Life Illustrated, can it be wrong for your boys to do the same? If you chew tobacco, can you reasonably expect them to eschew it? If you lounge, however unfrequently, about the bar-room of a tavern, can you blame them if they go there too?

Probably you regret that you have these habits, and warn your sons against falling into the same. You have seen the evil resulting from them, you say. They will hardly believe you sincere, and when precept teaches one thing and example another, the latter is almost sure to outweigh the former. We know a father who occasionally used profane language, but who was accustomed to punish his boys severely if he heard them swear. They grew up in habits of profanity in spite of him, and who wonders? Children are imitative beings, especially prone to imitate those whom they respect and love. Beware of setting them bad examples in anything.

But this negative line of conduct is not enough of itself. You must help them to acquire good habits, and as far as possible, give them access to good company.

One of the best habits your son can have is that of reading. A taste for reading has saved many a young man from ruin. It improves the mind, the manners, and the heart; keeps one from bad company, and serves in the place of good company where the latter cannot be had; repels vice and strengthens virtue, and gives nobler ideas of human life and human destiny.

If you can teach your boys to love books, you will find in those silent but eloquent monitors, the most efficient auxiliaries in the work of moral as well as intellectual cultivation. It is better to give them a taste for time it is in a state of repose.

Reading Aloud.

There is no treat so great as to hear good reading of any kind. Not one gentleman or lady in a hundred can read so as to please the ear, and send the words with gentle force to the heart and understanding. An indistinct utterance, whines, nasal twang, guttural notes, hesitations, and other vices of elocution, are almost universal. Why it is, no one can say, unless it be that either the pulpit, or the nursery, or the Sunday-school, gives the style in these days. Many a lady can sing Italian songs, with considerable execution, but cannot read English passably, yet reading is by far the most valuable accomplishment of the two. In most drawing-rooms, if anything is to be read, it is discovered that nobody can read; one has weak lungs, another gets hoarse, another chokes, another has an abominable sing-song, evidently a tradition of the way he said Watts' hymns when he was too young to understand them; another rumbles like a broad wheel wagon; another has a way of reading, which seems to proclaim that what is read is of no sort of consequence, and had better not be listened to.

Fast Men.

The vicious die early. They fall like shadows, or tumble like wrecks and ruins into the grave—often while quite young, almost always before forty. "The wicked liveth not half his days." The world at once rattles the truth and assigns the reason, by describing the dissolute as "Fast men," that is, they live fast, they spend their twelve hours in six; getting through the whole before the meridian, and dropping out of sight and into darkness, while others are in the glow and glory of life; "Their sun is down while it is yet day." And they might have helped it. Many a one dies long before he need.

Young men of genius, like Burns or Byron, to whom, when dissipated and profligate, thirty-seven is so fatal; and your obscure and nameless "Wandering Stars," who waste their youth in libertine indulgences—they cannot live long. They must die early. They put on the steam till they blow up the boiler. They run at such a rate, that the fire goes out for want of fuel. The machinery is destroyed by reckless speed and rapid wear. Nothing can save them. Their physical system cannot stand the strain they put on it; while the state of their minds is open to such that the soul would eat the substance of the most robust body, and make for itself a way of escape from the incessant hell of its own thoughts.—T. Binney.

The Value of Accuracy.

It is the result of every day experience, that steady attention to matters of detail lies at the foot of human progress; and that diligence, above all, is the mother of good luck. Accuracy is also of much importance, and an invariable mark of good training in a man. Accuracy in observation, accuracy in speech, accuracy in the transaction of affairs. What is done in business must be well done; for it is better to accomplish perfectly a small amount of work, than to half-do ten times as much. A wise man used to say, "Stay a little, that we may make an end the sooner."

Too little attention, however, is paid to the highly important quality of accuracy. As a man, eminent in practical science lately observed, "It is astonishing how few people I have met in the course of my experience, who can define a fact accurately." Yet, in business affairs, it is the manner in which even small matters are transacted, that often decides men for or against you. With virtue, capacity, and good conduct in other respects, the person who is habitually inaccurate cannot be trusted; his work has to be gone over again; and he thus causes an affinity of annoyances, vexation and trouble.

Truer words were never uttered than those spoken by Mr. Dargan, the Irish Railway contractor, at a public meeting in Dublin. "I have heard a great deal," he said, "about the independence that we were to get from this, that, and the other source; yet I have always been deeply impressed with the conviction, that our industrial independence depends upon ourselves. Simple industry and careful exactness would be the making of Ireland. We have, it is true, made a step; but perseverance is indispensably necessary for eventual success."

Sabbath Physiology.

The Almighty rested one seventh of the time of creation, commanding man to observe an equal repose. The neglect of this injunction will always, sooner or later, bring mental, moral, and physical death.

William Pitt died of apoplexy at the early age of forty-seven. When the destinies of nations hung, in a large measure on his doings, he felt compelled to give an unremitting attention to the affairs of state. Sabbath brought no rest to him, and soon the unwilling brain gave signs of exhaustion. But his presence in Parliament was conceived to be indispensable for explanation and defence of the public policy. Under these circumstances, it was his custom to eat heartily, substantial food most highly seasoned, just before going to his place, in order to afford the body that strength, and to excite the mind to that activity deemed necessary to the momentous occasion. But under the high tension, both brain and body perished prematurely.

Not long ago, one of the most active business men of England found his affairs so extended, that he deliberately determined to devote his Sabbaths to his accounts. He had a mind of a wide grasp. His views were so comprehensive, so far-reaching, that wealth came in upon him like a flood. He purchased a country seat at the cost of four hundred thousand dollars, determined that he would now have rest and quiet. But it was too late. As he stepped on his threshold after a survey of his late purchase, he became apoplectic. Although life was not destroyed, he only lives to be the wreck of a man.

It used to be said that a brick-kiln "must be kept burning over the Sabbath;" it is now known to be a fallacy. There can be no "must" against a divine command. Even now, it is a received opinion that iron blasts will bring ruin if not kept in continual operation. Eighteen years ago, an Englishman determined to keep the Sabbath holy as to them, with the result, as his books testified, that he made more iron in a given time, in proportion to the hands and the number and size of his furnaces, than any establishment in England, which was kept in operation during the Sabbath.

In our own New York, the mind of a man who made half a million a year, went out in the night of madness and an early grave in only two years, from the very strain put upon it by a variety of enterprises, and every one of which succeeded.

"It will take about five years to clear them off," said an observant master of an Ohio canal boat, alluding to the wearing out influences on the boatmen, who worked on Sabbaths, as well as on other days. As to the boatmen and firemen of the steamers on the Western river, which never lay by on the Sabbath, seven years is the average of life. The observance, therefore, of the seventh portion of our time, for the purposes of rest, is demonstrably a physiological necessity, a law of our nature.—Hall's Journal of Health.

THE NEW BELL. Our Municipal Fathers are doing their best to carry out the wishes, and answer the expectations of the community, in the purchase of a new bell. But there are difficulties in the way; they halt between two opinions. Two articles, but of different materials, claim their consideration. A Cast Steel and Composition bell. They are both excellent of their kind; clear toned, and about the same intensity. The Composition bell is the heaviest, weighing three thousand pounds; the Steel, but twenty-three hundred. The latter is the cheapest by several hundred dollars. But then, there is a drawback. The changeable nature of the material of which it is made, is an objection. In a climate like ours, it is said, they are very liable to accident. Have we no one amongst us, who is competent to advise, and who is willing to confer with those delegated with this trust, in order to assist them in their decision.

NORFOLK AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY. The twelfth annual meeting of this body was held on Wednesday last, at Dedham, and the following officers were elected for the year 1860:

President—Marshall P. Wilder of Dorchester.

Vice Presidents—Benjamin V. French of Dorchester, John Gardner of Dedham, Otis Cary of Foxborough, Charles Breck of Milton, Shadrach Atwood of Franklin, Joseph H. Billings of West Roxbury.

Corresponding Secretary—Charles C. Sewall of Medford.

Recording Secretary—Henry O. Hildreth of Dedham.

Treasurer—C. C. Churchill of Dedham.

Executive Committee—Marshall P. Wilder of Dorchester, Freedom Guild of Foxboro, Aaron D. Weld of West Roxbury, Hollis H. Hunnewell of Needham, Charles Hamant of Medford.

Finance Committee and Auditors—Martin Blinches of Dedham, Truman Clarke of Walpole, Lewis H. Kingsbury of Dedham, Wm. Flagg of Needham.

Wonderful. It is truly surprising what a great change can be made in one's kitchen and taste. It takes but a few rolls of paper to cover the walls of a room; and, when patterns are offered so rich and pleasing to the sight, as the Spring styles now selling by Caleb Packard, our citizens should improve the opportunity, and endeavor to make their homes look as cheerful and lovely within, as Nature's handiwork without.

CLERICAL CHANGE. We learn that the Rev. Quincy Whitney, having resigned his pastoral charge of the Universalist Society in this town, and preached his farewell sermon on Sunday last, has removed to Lancaster, his former place of residence. The Rev. J. P. Atkinson, for several years pastor of the Universalist Society of Orleans, Mass., is to preach to-morrow on trial.

GOOD WRITING INK. We have had the pleasure of using some ink manufactured by David B. Stetson of this town, which flows easily from the pen and leaves a good black mark. It would be an object to those using much of this article to give Mr. Stetson a call, as he sells his ink for half the usual price charged.

A FOWL DISEASE. A distemper, of a malignant caste, is raging among the poultry in our neighborhood. We have lost one—a beautiful pheasant—and now have others down with it. The symptoms are singular—a dull eye, pale comb; difficulty in breathing, not unlike a severe attack of the asthma; the complaint appears to be confined to the head and throat. Oil and molasses have been used with some success. Cannot some of our readers, benefit their age and generation, by furnishing a treatise on the subject? A suffering community would ever hold their memory in grateful remembrance.

FINE TROUT. We have again been made the recipients, through the politeness of Captain Curtis and Sergeant Spear, of some fine Trout, taken from the waters, in the neighborhood of Marshpee. They were delicious eating—a present which was duly appreciated in our family. The Captain and Staff have of late, placed us under numerous obligations, which will be our inclination and pleasure to cancel, the first opportunity.

BANKS IN THE UNITED STATES. The number of banks and branches on the 1st of January throughout the United States, according to the returns of the Treasury Department, was fifteen hundred and sixty-two; the capital paid in, $421,880,000, and the amount of specie on hand, $83,994,000. The resources of these banks, including loans, notes, securities and real estate, is stated at nearly one thousand millions, and their liabilities are $531,000,000.

Governor's Proclamation for a Day of Fast

By advice and with consent of the Council, I have appointed, and do hereby appoint, THURSDAY, the Fifth day of April next, a Day of Public Fasting, Humiliation and Prayer: And I invite the People of the Commonwealth, in observance of this long established and Christian custom, to suspend secular vocations, and to assemble in their accustomed places of public worship, to make humble confession to Almighty God of transgressions against His law, and to offer supplication for a continuance of His mercies.

That the bounties of the season may be assured to us:

That the rights of Industry may be protected, and labor receive its just reward:

That He will shield us from calamities that heretofore have plunged whole communities in deepest sorrow:

That the young may be blessed with hearts loyal to truth, and courage to do right:

That the institutions of Education, of Charity, and of Religion, may be prospered among us:

That the blessings of Justice and Liberty may every where be dispensed:

That Public Health and Public Peace may be forever preserved:

And finally, that He will vouchsafe to us all a higher than human faith in the wisdom of His Providence, in the justice and mercy of His dispensations, and in the Divine mission and record of His Son Jesus Christ our Lord.

MY BIRTH DAY. "This is my birth day," said a little six-year-old to us, a few mornings since, in all the conscious pride, of one who had arrived at the pinnacle of her destiny. Happy childhood! in blissful ignorance of the future; scarcely on the threshold of life—yet eager to press forward, to grasp its empty realities, and share its disappointments. May no dark cloud of adversity ever overshadow her pathway.

SIZE OF THE AMERICAN FLAG. The standard of the Army is fixed at six feet six inches, by four feet four inches; the number of stripes is thirteen—seven red and six white. It will be perceived that the flag is just one half longer than it is broad, and that its proportions are perfect when properly carried out. The first stripe at the top is red, the next white, and so down alternately, which makes the last red. The blue "field" for the stars is the width and square of the first seven stripes—four red and three white. The stripes extend from the side of the "field" to the extremity of the flag. The next stripe is wide, extending the entire length of it, and directly under the field in strong and pleasant relief, then follow the remaining stripes alternately. The number of stars on the field is now thirty-three, and the army and navy immediately add another star on the admission of a new State to the Union.

City Matters.—Political Convention.—Union Party in the Field. Legislature.—Governor Banks and the Veto.—Congress.

The pleasant weather of the week, has attracted quite an influx of visitors from the suburbs and other places, giving our thoroughfares an animated appearance. Washington street is daily thronged with passengers, crowding our sidewalks, moving in solid phalanx, up and down this business street, from morning to night. But this great perambulation, is not a reliable indication of revival in trade. Business continues dull, and Dry Goods'Jobbers have got the "Blues" most extensively; having large rents to pay, but small sales, and smaller profit. Building is the only mechanical pursuit, that is lively, while wages for the "Joues" are at a low figure.

Money continues plenty, with no increasing demand in the common channels of business; in fact, there is a continued tendency for lower rates. This being the Presidential year, every body will be head over ears in politics; producing by no means a salutary influence on the business concerns of the country.

We were in, as "A looker on in Venice," at the new Melodeon to-day, to listen to the speeches of the State Convention of the Union and Constitution party, who are organizing though rather at a late day, for the Presidential campaign. Speeches were made by Marshall P. Wilder, George T. Curtis, Leverett Saltonstall, and others, in opposition both to the Republican and Democratic parties, and in favor of a new opposition party, that will bring the North and South politically together. Some of the speakers made quite an onslaught upon the Republican ranks, and some let loose the "dogs of war" upon the Democrats. This Conservative party has for its design, an independent nomination for President, by a National Convention to be held in May next, at Baltimore, and the lucky man who is to receive the nomination, is Judge McLean of Ohio or Edward Everett. Now the only tendency in this new National organization will have, is to weaken the Republican camp, and increase the chances of the Charleston nominee. But we shall see.

The State Legislative Session is drawing to a close. Many new Statutes of some importance have been passed.

For reasons best known to the Legislators, the Governor's veto on the Militia Bill, striking out the word "White," is an able production; argumentative, dignified and truthful. The best State Paper Governor Banks ever gave to the Legislature. The Bill was passed in violation of the Constitution and with an evident design to head off the little man of iron by some of the knowing ones of his own party. There are some intense Republicans in your County, that savor of disaffection of the Governor's course on slavery.

The Veto Message should have silenced them, for it is unanswerable in Constitutional law, and reflects high praise on his Excellency as an American Statesman.

The Bill for extending the Old Colony and Fall River Railroad from Fall River City to Newport, (R. I.) is killed in the Senate as dead as a hammer. A Bill has passed nearly through all its stages, making the election of Selectmen and Assessors of towns, alternate, like the choice of School Committee. Should it pass, it will go to the towns, for ratification or rejection. This is proper.

The most important intelligence from Washington is the progress of the Appropriation Bill, giving $605,000 for expense of Fortifications, and $3,491,000 for sundry civil expenses. This will give a re-action to the stone business of Quincy. The members of Congress are driving business in good earnest, and a better working set the country never had. The calendar will probably be cleared, so that an adjournment may take place by the middle of June. Mexican affairs remain very unsettled.

RAILROAD TIME. On and after Monday next there will be a change in the time of running the trains on the Old Colony and Fall River Railroad. For full particulars see their advertisement on the top of the last column, third page.

A new stock of men's and boys' soft hats. A good assortment at Gill's.

ELEGANT TAPESTRY CARPETS, at Auction prices. Twelve thousand yards are advertised in our paper to-day, by the New England Carpet Company, of Boston.

SALT SPRINGS. The amount of salt manufactured on the Onondaga, (N. Y.) Salt Springs Reservation, during the year ending September 30, 1859, is stated in the Governor's message to have been within a fraction of seven million bushels.

Notwithstanding the strike at Lynn and other places, C. Gill & Co. are well supplied with a first rate stock of women's, misses' and children's boots and shoes, which they are selling at their usual prices.

STRAWBERRIES.—A new variety. We would call attention to the advertisement of Mr. Hooker to be found in another column.

The Nursery here spoken of, is one of the richest, for its rare exotics, and the most extensive, in the variety and quality of its shrubs, plants, and fruit, to be found in the country. The cultivation of the Strawberry, has claimed the particular attention of the proprietor, which, after years of experimenting, he has brought to great perfection.

The public are indebted to him, for many new species, which have lately found especial favor with horticulturists; particularly the "Hooker," so called. This plant is vigorous and hardy; well adapted to our climate; exceedingly productive; of large size; dark color, and high flavor; it is said to be excellent for preserving, losing nothing in richness or flavor. It has perfect flowers, it therefore requires no other variety planted near, as a fertilizer. We hope to see more attention paid to its culture. Every family, by appropriating a few feet of land, may add an additional ornament to their gardens, besides furnishing themselves with an abundance of this early and delicious fruit.

For the Patriot.
An Enquiry.

FRIEND GREEN: Some five or six weeks since, the surplus funds of the "Quincy Social (Snob) Assemblies," were voted into the hands of one of our charitably disposed citizens for the purpose of charity, and the said person was to report the recipients of his charity, through your columns. Not having seen any report on the subject, we should like to enquire through you, what has become of the funds? A FEW OF THE SNOBS.

The Mechanic.

There he goes, with sturdy tread,
Telling for his honest bread,
Stooping uncomplained and cheeks high flushed,
While the city yet is hushed,
O, the strong mechanic!
The sinewy-armed mechanic!
With his broad chest swelling to the stroke
Of the hammer against the lusty oak, Driving the nail with a hearty will,
Whistling or carolling—never still,
But ever in labor doing his will
Who loves the noble mechanic.

Elms smoke and Vesuvius flame
On the allies of north-born flame;
But to hew the rock from the vaulting cone,
And to change to blessings the flinty stone,
These do the mechanic,
The sinewy-armed mechanic;
Giving his babes what God gave him,
Force of muscle and vigor of limb;
Scorning the fear that his boys shall be
The pampered weaklings of luxury,
Or his girls fair puppets for men to see,
The brawny-backed mechanic.

But mind, I speak of the real thing—
Not of the kind who shout, and sing,
And smoke at the tavern, and curse abroad,
And who care for neither thimble nor God;
But the true, the earnest mechanic,
The clean, white-souled mechanic!
The man who polishes heart and mind
While he frames the window and shapes the blind,
And utters his thought with an honest tongue
That is set as true as his fingers are hung—
This is the nobleman of mechanics,
The noble band of mechanics.

Retreat of Winter

See where early Winter presses off,
Far to the north, and calls his ruddy blasts:
His blasts off, and quit the howling hills,
The shattered forest, and the ravaged vale;
While softer gales succeed at whose kind touch,
Dissolving snows in luscious rain,
The mountains lift their green heads to the sky.

As yet the trembling year is unconformed,
And Winter off, and calls his ruddy blasts:
Chills the pole north, and bids his driving sleets
Deform the day deliriously; so that scarce
The bitter knows the time, with bill and quill,
To shake the sounding marsh; or from the shore
The plovers when to scatter o'er the heath,
And sing their wild notes to the listening waste

Oh, for the sunny days
Of childhood's smiles and tears
Ere Time had brought the weight
Of other years!

Life was all beautiful,
And bright its opening hours,
Ere blighting care had touched
Its blossoming flowers.

New life dies quickly by,
It hopes and all its fears,
And I have often wept
With bitter tears!

Oh, would that I had lain
My youthful, careless head,
In childish innocence,
On earth's green bed.

Where violets soonest blow,
And where the pale rose
Would throw a blooming shade
O'er my repose!

Methods it were most meet
To gently drop and die,
In childhood's sunny days,
Ere sin come nigh.

The heart that knows no care,
No bitter grief nor guile,
To fly away and be
At rest, the while.

Anecdotes.

I tell you Susan, that I shall commit suicide if you don't have me.
Well, Charles, as soon as you have given me that evidence of your affection, I will believe you love me.
He immediately hung himself upon her neck and said:
There now, is not that an act of suicide?

A blacksmith, having been slandered, was advised to apply to the courts for redress.
He replied with true wisdom:
I shall never sue anybody for slander; I can go into my shop and work out a better character in six months than I could get in a court house in a year.

Pompey, are you willing to be damned, if it should be the Lord's will? inquired a pious friend.
O yes, massa, and more too; I am willing you be damned, too, massa, replied Pompey.

I cannot imagine, said Alderman H. why my whiskers should turn gray, so much sooner than the hair of my head.
Because you have worked so much more with your jaws than your brain, observed a wag.

Dr. M'Lane's CELEBRATED VERMIFUGE AND LIVER PILLS.

Many of the most popular remedies now before the public. We refer to

Dr. Chas. M'Lane's Celebrated Vermifuge and Liver Pills.

We do not recommend them as universal Cure-alls, but simply for what their name purports, viz.:

THE VERMIFUGE, For expelling Worms from the human system. It has also been administered with the most satisfactory results to various Animals subject to Worms.

THE LIVER PILLS, For the cure of LIVER COMPLAINTS, all BILIOUS DERANGEMENTS, SICK HEAD-ACHE, &c. In cases of FEVER AND AGUE, preparatory to or after taking Quinine, they almost invariably make a speedy and permanent cure.

As specifics for the above mentioned diseases, they are Unrivaled, and never known to fail when administered in accordance with the directions.

Their unprecedented popularity has induced the proprietors, FLEMING BROTHERS, PITTSBURGH, PA.

to dispose of their Drug business, in which they have been successfully engaged for the last Twenty Years, and they will now give their undivided time and attention to their manufacture. And being determined that Dr. M'Lane's Celebrated Vermifuge and Liver Pills shall continue to occupy the high position they now hold among the great remedies of the day, they will continue to spare neither time nor expense in procuring the Best and Purest material, and compound them in the most thorough manner. Address all orders to

FLEMING BROS. Pittsburgh, Pa. P.S. Dealers and Physicians ordering from others than Fleming Bros. will do well to write their orders distinctly, and take none but Dr. M'Lane's, prepared by Fleming Bros. Pittsburgh, Pa. To those wishing to give them a trial, we will forward per mail, post paid, to any part of the United States, one box of Pills for twelve three-cent postage stamps, or one trial of Vermifuge for fourteen three-cent stamps. PACKARD'S Great Regenerator for the HUMAN HAIR.

IS now too well known to need any further recommendation from any source. Yet to satisfy the most credulous, I will publish the following testimony.

Harrison Sq., Dorchester, Mar. 30, 1858. MR. PACKARD—Sir:—I have given your Regenerator a fair trial and find it all you claim it to be. My hair was very gray; it is now restored to perfect color. All the humor is removed from the scalp. In short, I have now a perfect head of hair. I am willing to go before any Judge of the Peace and make oath to the above, if you wish it. E. BIRD.

What it has done for him it will do for every body that will use it.
